McCLOUD, CALIF., Aug. 24.—What is the news?
Thousands pass in silence the body of Will Rogers, lying in his flower-covered coffin, with Will Rogers far away. We are creatures of little imagination, content to see the hollow shell and ask no questions.

Ten thousand caterpillars, slowly crawling past an empty cocoon, never asking or thinking about the butterfly escaped from the cocoon, would imitate well a human funeral community.

Where is Will Rogers now? That is the only important question.

CALIFORNIANS disapprove of communism and communistic propaganda, and will not tolerate it, in their state.

At Santa Rosa avowed communists are seized, beaten. Two, Jack Green and Solomon Nitzberg, were tarred and feathered.

Despatches say that "unofficial night riders" are expected to seize and deport communists.

To the objection that those using tar and feathers had shown contempt for a law the vigilantes reply that, in that direction, the communists set the example.

IT IS AN unpleasant situation, in a country where every man may vote. Who can offer sound objection to a plan that permits of majority rule? Is there any better system? Would rule by a small minority, say by the 30,000 registered communists in this country be preferable?

MORE INTERESTING than anything in this northern part of California, only fifty miles from the Oregon border, is tall, snow-covered Mount Shasta, rising toward the sky more than 14,000 feet.

When you come here, be sure to visit that mountain, you will find it worth while. All around its foot the great pines and firs are crowding, as though seeking refuge and protection from the giant sawmill, and its 1,200 men that eat trees by the hundreds of thousands every year.

You could imagine the old mountain that has watched the growing trees through thousands of generations, sorrowful, in its inability to help.

ABOUT TEN YEARS ago, old Shasta did what it could, and sent pouring down from the lower end of its great glacier a sudden torrent of water, mud and huge stones, that would have wiped out this small city and its lumber mill, had the torrent gone far enough. It spread, slowed down, stopped just in time, and the mill goes on, feeding great tree trunks, ten feet in diameter, to the cruel ribbon saws that dispose of the "beautiful trees, in a few seconds.

Changed into lumber, they make homes for men, which might comfort them.

We changed into corpses, make food for worms, far more gruesome.

AS A MATTER of duty, your narrator went to visit Mount Shasta this morning, planning to tell you all about it. To visit a mountain and

ROOSEVELT HITS AT 'OLD FOGIES' IN CLUB ADDRESS

President Urges Youth To Challenge Old Time Methods

SAYS THERE IS NEED TO IMPROVE SOCIAL ORDER

'We Must Adjust Our Ideas To The Facts Today,' Declares Executive

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Rapping sharply at "Tories" and "the reactionaries of 1935," President Roosevelt tonight urged American youth of all parties to "unite and challenge" the methods of the old order.

Seated at a desk in the basement oval room of the White House, two microphones before him, the president spoke primarily to the convention of the Young Democratic clubs in Milwaukee, but also to the nation at large.

"Rules are not necessarily sacred—principles are," he said. "The methods of the old order are not, as some would have you believe, above the challenge of youth."

The chief executive asserted at the outset that, despite reports to the contrary, his address would not be devoted to answering his political

WETS HOLD LEAD IN TEXAS BALLOT

State's Most Populous Centers Vote Heavily For Prohibition Repeal

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Texas' most populous centers voted heavily for repeal of state-wide prohibition today, early returns indicated tonight. Fragmentary reports from rural areas showed a correspondingly heavy opposite trend.

San Antonio and Houston reported the heaviest wet majorities, returns from 116 of the 142 precincts in Harris county (Houston) showing 8,734 for repeal and 2,392 against. San Antonio showed a majority of almost 8 to 1 against prohibition in earliest returns.

The more populous precincts in Dallas county, with no actual figures available, were running two and three to one for repeal on partial counts.

Waco late today had cast 4,000 votes on the repeal issue and was still showing a slight lead against prohibition.

The early count was about 5 to 4 for repeal at Austin, the state capital.

Near Sweetwater, in west Texas, the first complete box, a rural one at Mulberry Canyon, cast seven votes, all against repeal, and all for other constitutional amendments providing for free text books and old-age pensions.

ACT IS NECESSARY FOR MISSISSIPPI TO GET ROAD FUNDS

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 24.—(AP)—Ten million dollars of public works funds have been earmarked for construction of highways in Mississippi, Colonel E. W. Clark, assistant PWA administrator, said here today, but added that it would require a legislative act for the state to obtain the money.

The state would be required to match the federal grant on the basis of 55 per cent to 45 per cent of PWA funds.

The assistant administrator, here with eight other PWA officials on a "flying tour" of the nation, said the earmarked funds could not be held for Mississippi's account "indefinitely," and indicated that the state would have to act before the end of the year. Governor Sennett Comer was asked during the afternoon if he would call a special session of the legislature to act on the PWA offer, but declined to answer.

AGED MAN HANGS HIMSELF IN GARAGE OF RESIDENCE

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 24.—(AP)—T. J. Childress, about 70, who resided with his niece, Mrs. E. G. Huckaby, here ended his life today by hanging himself in the garage at the home.

His health was ascribed as the cause of the act.

Childress was found hanging in the garage by Mrs. Huckaby when she instituted a search for him upon discovering him missing from the house.

TAX BILL SENT TO WHITE HOUSE

Measure To Put Levies On Wealth Ready For Approval Of President

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Tagged by Republicans a "purely political gesture," the $250,000,000 administration tax bill tonight smashed through its last congressional barriers and was ready for certain presidential approval.

Representative Crowther, Republican, New York, used the political phrase in describing the legislation when a conference report compromising house and senate differences was submitted to the house.

Despite his assault, the house adopted the report, 247 to 72, and in less than 30 minutes the senate did the same—without even a standing vote.

In its final dress the bill followed the broad outline laid down by the president in a message on June 19. It increased surtaxes on the bigger individual incomes, boosted taxes on estates, raised gift levies and stiffened corporation taxes.

In one major particular, it departed far from the president's proposal. He

MISSISSIPPI VOTE DRIVE NEARS END

Bitter Contest For Governor To Be Decided At Polls On Tuesday

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 24.—(AP)—Ending a campaign marked by stinging personalities, caustic invective, charges and counter-charges which have purported to involve even the national administration, Mississippi Democratic voters will go to the polls Tuesday to nominate a governor, along with five other state officials and several hundred minor officeholders.

The gubernatorial nomination will go either to Paul Johnson, lawyer and former congressman of Hattiesburg, or Hugh L. White, lumberman of Columbia, Miss., and with it will end one of the most bitterly contested primary run-off campaigns in Mississippi in recent years, in the opinion of most political observers.

Whether an issue or not, Senator Huey Long of Louisiana has figured most prominently in the run-off primary, with the White forces seeking to make Long the sole issue in the campaign.

Denying Long support, Johnson has accused White of an attempt to

PRESIDENT SIGNS NEW FARM BILL

Says Amendments Will Enable AAA To Increase Work For Agriculture

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed a bill amending the agriculture adjustment act today with the declaration it will enable the AAA "to move forward in its constructive and essential work in behalf of agriculture."

He made the following statement: "This legislation supplements and strengthens the original agricultural adjustment act, enacted May 12, 1933, which unquestionably has been of great value to American farmers. It carries forward the agricultural program on the broad economic basis of the original act."

"This act as a whole will enable the agricultural adjustment administration to move forward in its constructive and essential work in behalf of agriculture."

His signature was the signal for the department of justice to seek dismissal of more than 500 temporary injunctions which have been granted against processing tax collections.

The bill is the result of efforts begun in congress 18 months ago to broaden AAA's powers and strengthen its legal position. It was pushed through this session after the supreme court killed NRA codes and a supreme court test of the farm program this fall became a probability.

The measure ratifies the processing taxes under which $900,000,000 already has been collected.

It authorizes continuation of rental or benefit payments in connection with acreage and production adjustment agreements.

Should the supreme court hold the processing taxes invalid, the bill provides that a processor may obtain a refund only on taxes which he can show have not been passed on to

CONGRESS OKEHS PLAN TO INSURE PEACE FOR U. S.

America Will Resort To Unprecedented Measures To Maintain Neutrality

PRESIDENT IS EXPECTED TO SIGN BILL AT ONCE

Six Months Mandatory Embargo Placed On Arms Shipments By Resolution

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Congress gave stern notice to the world today by word and action that America would resort to unprecedented measures to preserve her neutrality during any foreign war.

Scenes rivaling the feverish, dark days of 1917 marked the epochal step taken by the senate in sending to the White House a modified yet sweeping resolution placing a six months' mandatory embargo on arms shipments to belligerents. President Roosevelt's signature was forecast confidently.

The decisive 77 to 2 vote by which it approved house amendments to its original neutrality proposal was chapped quickly by another dramatic senate interchange that culminated in a refusal to register what some termed an official "rebuke" to Senator Pope, Democrat, Idaho, for a statement he made in England predicting the United States might become involved in another world war.

Although disagreeing 47 to 26 a resolution by Senator La Follette, Progressive, Wisconsin, serving notice that the senate had not authorized any of its members to represent it abroad "directly or indirectly," senators made it plain that such statements as that of Pope were "unfortunate" but carried no official weight. The neutrality resolution, repre-

FOUR KILLED AS TRAIN HITS CAR

Locomotive Strikes Automobile At Grade Crossing In Tennessee

LOUDON, Tenn., Aug. 24.—(AP)—A man and his two sons were instantly killed and a daughter fatally injured today when a Southern railway train struck their automobile at the Robison crossing.

The fifth passenger in the car was perhaps fatally injured.

The dead are: Will Grimes, 36, Johnny Grimes, 16, Claude Grimes, 14, Miss Ruby Grimes, 18.

Mrs. Jennie Grimes, mother of the family, was taken to the Harrison Memorial hospital and had not regained consciousness late tonight.

Will Grimes was a tenant farmer living four miles southwest of here. The crossing is considered one of the most dangerous in this section because approach to the track is screened.

James Grimes, distant relative of the family, who witnessed the accident, said "I saw the train was going to hit the car as it drove on the track and I turned my head to keep from seeing them hit."

The family had been to Loudon to spend the day and was only about two miles from home when the tragedy occurred.

Huey Long Assailed As Labor's Foe

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Terming Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana a "notorious scab," W. A. Murphy, state labor commissioner, refused today an invitation of the Oklahoma City Trades and Labor council to be a joint speaker with Long at a Labor day celebration here.

"I've carried a union card 35 years and I'll be damned if I'll participate in or even be near a Labor day celebration with that notorious scab. I am informed he never hired a union man in his life," Murphy declared.

Murphy said he intended to attend some sort of Labor day meeting, "but I won't be in Oklahoma City. It'll be somewhere else."

"A man trying to destroy the only president in the White House who ever tried to help union labor doesn't deserve the support of labor, let alone being its guest, and I am not going to have any part in anything he is connected with."

Long has accepted the invitation.

POSSE SEARCHES FOR DESPERADO

Negro Who Fired At White Man Is Wanted By Lincoln Parish Sheriff

A posse was searching woods of a wide territory in the vicinity of Calhoun and Choudrant Saturday night for Cletus Gray, 22, negro desperado, who fired four shots at L. D. Allen, Choudrant resident, about noon Saturday. None of the bullets took effect.

According to Sheriff A. J. Thigpen of Lincoln parish, the negro is considered a dangerous character and has been in trouble on numerous occasions. He was arrested about a year ago for shooting another negro but was never convicted.

The shooting was the result of an argument over a settlement with Mr. Allen, according to the sheriff. The negro whipped out his revolver and fired on the white man without warning it was stated.

When last seen he was entering a dense woods about half way between Choudrant and Calhoun and Sheriff Thigpen quickly rounded up a posse and set out to apprehend the negro.

Sheriff Thigpen said he would offer a $25 reward for any information that would lead to the arrest of Gray.

He is described as being tall and slender, very black and has an upper gold tooth. When last seen he was wearing blue overalls and jumper.

DOWNTOWN RAID BY GUNMEN NETS HAUL IN TAX RECEIPTS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Six robbers flashed pistols on clerks at a state department of revenue office in downtown Philadelphia today, bound seven men with sashcord and fled with $1,500 in tax receipts.

The men were forced to lie on the floor, face down. The lone woman in the office was not bound. She told the robbers she was "too scared to move."

While two of the gunmen tied up six employees and a salesman with them, two others stood guard at the door and another pair made a systematic search of the safe, the door of which was open.

The money was wrapped in packages preparatory to being sent to Harrisburg and was lying on a table. The office is on the second floor of a Broad street building a few blocks north of city hall.

JEWES ARE BARRED ON TROLLEY CARS IN GERMAN CENTER

BERLIN, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Jews were barred from trolley cars in Magdeburg today as new restrictions brought new hardships for thousands of others.

The street cars bore signs: "Jews not wanted."

Karschin meat dealers were forced to make deliveries to Jewish customers late at night and secretly, and in some provincial towns, many Jews were depending on mails and freight for delivery of necessities from Berlin.

They feared this method, too, might be stopped because of edicts in various places against "Aryans" trading with Jews.

Writing in a special number of the "Periodical of the German Law Academy," Dr. Ludwig Fischer, Munich official, demanded imprisonment with the loss of honor for "racial treason" and "racial disgrace."

SNARL IS CAUSED AS INCREASE IS VOTED IN SENATE

House Flatly Refuses To Consider Action On Amendment To Lift Loan

LAWMAKERS WILL MEET AGAIN MONDAY AT NOON

Representatives Send Adjournment Resolution Back To The Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The senate tonight postponed the adjournment of the congressional session until next week after rescinding its prior approval of a sine die adjournment resolution.

Tangled up in an unprecedented wrangle over the third deficiency bill, to which the senate added amendments calling for cotton and wheat loans, the house finally voted to return the adjournment resolution to the senate.

Immediately the senate acted. The rescinding action was taken without a record vote just a few minutes before the previously set midnight hour.

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, immediately moved a recess until Monday at noon. This carried without objection.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Adjournment of congress at midnight because more doubtful tonight when house leaders said they would accede to the senate's request for a return of the resolution providing for stopping work automatically at that hour.

Advised that the senate had voted to request return of the adjournment resolution, Representative O'Connor of New York, one of the Democratic leaders, said:

"To return the resolution would be simple courtesy. We couldn't turn them down."

The unprecedented tangle centered upon a senate amendment to the deficiency bill, calling for mandatory loans of 12 cents on cotton and 1-1/2 cents a pound on wheat.

House leaders refused to either bring the amendment to a vote on the floor or appoint conferees to meet with the senate for a settlement of differences. Involved in the bill also were millions of dollars for administering social security, the Guffey coal bill, the new neutrality law, and the alcohol control administration.

Whether the house would unbend and send the adjournment back to the senate, so that branch could reconsider it, was at first uncertain.

When the motion to recall it was first made in the senate, leaders obviously delayed bringing it to a vote. Wordy debate ensued, until finally, with little more than an hour to go before adjournment, a vote was taken.

COTTON RIDER CAUSES HOUSE-SENATE SNARL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Senate addition of cotton and wheat loan riders to the third deficiency bill tonight precipitated a senate-house snarl that threatened adjournment and endangered an appropriation for the social security program.

Under the urging of rebellious southern senators, the senate earlier had revised the "must" deficiency measure.

IMPORTS, EXPORTS INCREASE REPORTED FOR JUNE AND JULY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP)—An increase in both United States exports and imports from June to July, usually a period of decline, was reported by the commerce department today.

Exports gained 2 per cent where they usually decline one while imports were up 13 per cent against a usual drop of three per cent. Both exports and imports were larger than in July of last year, but the large import increase resulted in an unfavorable balance of trade for this July.

The export increase was largely accounted for by machinery and vehicles, tobacco, wood and paper, and chemical products.

Notable import gains were made in vegetable food products and beverages, especially sugar and crude rubber.

HEIRESS PASSES UP NIGHT LIFE ON VISIT TO VENICE

VENICE, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, is passing up Venice's somewhat limited night life.

She and her husband are dividing their time between the Lido and their hotel, overlooking the Grand canal. A private motor cruiser takes them from the hotel to Lido Beach, sometimes twice daily.

In the evening the couple usually dine with friends at the hotel's roof gardens, rarely leaving the hotel later.

WILL ROGERS HAS HIS LAST SAY

Kind Words For Rex Beach, Bill King And Other Old Friends

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article probably is the last written work of Will Rogers. It was sent by air mail from Juneau, Alaska, on August 10, and received after his death.)

BY WILL ROGERS

Well, all I know is just what I hear when I talk to somebody, and as I generally do all the talking, why I don't hear much, but I started out on this trip with the idea that I was going to do some listening.

As I told you in a daily dispatch awhile back, Rex Beach hit Juneau just before we took off. Rex seemed to know everybody there, and all over Alaska. That "Spoilers" I expect is one of the finest novels ever written about this or any country.

He hasn't been up here in years. He has always maintained some mining claims up around Nome, but it's fishing and hunting where his heart lies. He had no more than hit Juneau there a few weeks ago when the very next day he was out in what they call "Strip" fishing for what I think they call "Jack Salmon." Then a little later he will start bear hunting, and he sure knows this country.

He came to Nome in about 1901, that was when he was really "Hot." You see the "88ers" were for Dawson and the Klondike District, a thousand and more miles from Nome. Then the Nome strike took it away from the old Klondike District.

Rex and his wife, Greta, (that's Mrs. Fred Stone's sister) they were responsible for me in the movies. They were making a great Alaskan picture, and the character was "Laughing Bill Hyde." It was one of his famous short stories, by that same name.

I was playing that summer in the Follies, and they got the "Nut" idea that I could play the part. We made it while I was working in the show-

It was made at the old Ft. Lee Studios, in New Jersey just across the river from New York City. They used to make an awful lot of pictures there. It was made for Mr. Sam Goldwyn, who has all these years remained the famous producer. With producers coming and going, and changing, he has held his own right at the top.

He was my first picture boss, and we have remained friends all these years, a rare combination.

I learned what little I know about mining, which is practically nothing, from that picture we made. Rex supervised the picture, and he made em make all the details as to the actual mining scenes, exactly correct. "Sluice Boxes" and "Panning" the gold. Then Rex wrote all the subtitles, and they were "Wows." I went to the barber and got a hair cut right in the middle of the picture and like to spoiled it. I didn't know what I was doing, (and here I was going in one door with long hair, and coming out with a hair cut). They all like to had a fit. I think yet it was the best picture I ever made, for I hadn't learned to try to act. There ain't nothing worse than an actor when we act.

I have always had a great respect and friendship for Rex and Mrs. Beach. Rex is an unusual man, outside all this writing. He is an authority on a lot of things. He has a lovely home near Sebring, Florida, and went to work and cleared a lot of swamp lake land and started raising celery on a real scientific principle. He ships it to New York and it's a real boni die going concern.

Now he has got some Florida dirt, or something that is the very mineral that every person, or plant needs to make it grow. Who ever heard of

AGENT RECEIVES COTTON TICKETS

Tax Exemption Certificates For Ouachita Farmers Are Available

Cotton tax exemption certificates for Ouachita parish farmers who made their applications before the scheduled expiration date, July 1, have arrived here at the office of E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent.

The applications of farmers who were late in applying for certificates will be considered later by the state office at Baton Rouge, Mr. Strahan said.

In connection with issuing the certificates already received, the parish agent said: "We are ready to make delivery of the tickets at any time during the next two or three weeks. Those who have certificates will be required to come to the office in person to sign a receipt for same before we can make delivery."

"Applicants who have tenants working under them should bring their tenants with them as each tenant's certificate is issued him in his own name. This does not apply, however, to plantations on which a trustee has been appointed by the tenants to handle the certificates in the name of the trustee. In the latter case, the trustee only should come in for the tickets for the plantation."

Information from the state allotment board in charge of issuing the certificates said: "The use of these certificates by any other person other than the person to whom they are issued is illegal and will make the certificates subject to cancellation. The only exceptions to this regulation are those which cover cotton sold in the seed and the use of certificates by share tenants on the same farm. "Since any transfer or assignment of a certificate (or portion thereof) which is not made in accordance with the regulations is invalid and of no effect, such certificate (or portion thereof) shall be cancelled by the Division of Cotton, and the ginner in the parish and in adjoining parishes and the commissioner of internal revenue shall be notified of such cancellation."

ACCIDENT VICTIM IS SOME BETTER

The condition of Lillian Vallery, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. U. Vallery, 503 North Fourth street, West Monroe, who was critically injured in a traffic collision at the intersection of Natchitoches and North Fourth streets, West Monroe, Friday night, was reported to be improved at St. Francis sanitarium last night.

The little girl suffered a severe fracture of the skull and a painful shoulder injury. It is not believed that her injuries will prove fatal.

Dick Vallery, the girl's three-year-old brother, received cuts and bruises but was not seriously hurt.

The accident occurred, police said, when an ice truck, being driven by the children's father and on which they were riding, collided with a roadster at the intersection. The roadster, driven by Ervin Getchell, 402 Crosley street, West Monroe, was said to have struck the truck in the middle of one side.

A CHARACTERISTIC SKETCH OF WILL ROGERS

Will Rogers . . . his kindly smile and homely wisdom endeared him to the people.

The Story Of A Great Man Who Loved People

Will Rogers, Known To More People Than Any Other American, Was The "Court Jester" To Democracy

(This is the third of four stories revealing those homely sides of Will Rogers which gave him his unique position as First Jester to the American people.)

By Willis Thornton
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

It was "Casey" Jones, himself the granddaddy of American flyers, who called Will Rogers "Aviation's Patron Saint."

Certainly it was a strange thing that this cowboy, brought up to rope and saddle and the feel of horseflesh between his knees, should have become America's No. 1 air passenger and No. 1 air travel booster all in one.

Aviation generally recognized that, and the fact that Will never lost an opportunity to "plug" air travel in his writings, his stage work, even in his conversation.

He had an almost pathetic trust in pilots and Lindbergh was his hero of heroes.

"You know, I am at heart a coward. I am scared of everything, but I just got so much trust in these pilots that I just crawl up in there like a baby crawling up into its mother's arms. . . . Why, those fellows are the most careful in the world. . . . I always figure their lives are worth more than mine. I've lived mine, and had my fling. . . ."

Will Rogers wrote that seven years ago in a magazine article.

Began In Cockpit Days
He was not coward at heart. With customary self-deprecation he wrote that to reassure others in days when air travel was not so well-organized as it is today. But you can see him climbing into Wiley Post's plane at Point Barrow "like a baby crawling up into its mother's arms"—that was the kind of faith he had in his fellow Oklahoman.

Rogers was a flying enthusiast long before commercial flying had been "shaken down" into the systematic affair it is today. As long ago as 1920 he went up in a studio plane in California with a former army ace. The pilot, G. B. Manly, did some fancy turns and rolls, but reported that Rogers just looked out over the edge of the careening cockpit and chewed his gum a little faster. When they came down, Will shifted his gum to the other cheek and remarked dryly:

"Try anything once. Try some things often. When you go in again?"

Violated Own Principle
From that time on, Will was a confirmed air passenger. He never tried to learn to fly himself, nor did he acquire any great knowledge of the technical side of aviation.

His death resulted from violating his own principle that he preached over and over—ride the regular commercial airways, but go slow about casual flights where equipment and facilities are not all they might be. But Wiley Post was his friend, a fellow Oklahoman, one of the world's great pilots—how could anything go wrong?

Will Rogers flew not only all the airways of this country, but those of Europe. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce estimates that since 1925 he had flown more than 150,000 miles on regularly scheduled air lines.

And he began in the days when casual accommodation in open cockpit mail planes was often the best available. In touring Europe by air, he made at least one flight in Russia in a single-engine ship under bad weather conditions which was highly dangerous. And he knew it. He was no coward at heart.

Spurred Aviation Progress
The European tour showed him how far Europe was ahead of the United States in airport development. He returned and launched a one-man campaign for more and better airports. It bore fruit.

Once when he and a pilot "overshot" a town which could not be recognized, Will offered to buy the paint for any town that would mark its name on building roofs visible from planes. The response snowed him under, but nobody knows how many lives may have been saved by this personal campaign of town identification.

turned over and lay on its back with both pilot and passenger upside down. Will crawled out, scratched his head, and said:

"This serves me right for not going to the Democratic convention instead."

In recent years when Will's life was a constant succession of jumps from one city to another, he flew whenever possible. In a way he became to air passengers what pioneers like Lindbergh were to pilots. Now the award of the medal of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which was to have been given him through Jimmy Doolittle, secretary, must go to his widow.

A Bit Of Rogers Philosophy
Aviation had no stauncher defender. When Lindbergh nosed his ship over in Mexico City when landing with his fiancée, Ann Morrow, and then took her up again directly, as is the flyers' custom to prevent loss of nerve, there was some criticism among those who did not understand. But Will Rogers understood. He wrote:

"This thing about 'somebody's life being too valuable to risk in an airplane' is not only the bunk; it's an insult to the men we ask to do our flying. Where does anybody's life come in to be any more valuable than anyone else's? Ain't life just as precious to one as another? . . . Say, get over that old ego. This country will replace you before the folks get home from your funeral."

In Will Rogers' case, it will not be so easy.

"Gly-Cas Greatest Medicine of All," Declares Local Man

Mr. Goodwin Now Able to Eat and Sleep Good for the First Time in Years; Regains His Strength, Freed of All Pain and Suffering.

"Gly-Cas was the very medicine I should have had years before," said Mr. C. H. Goodwin, 3520 Lee avenue, Monroe, well known and respected local gentleman who is 76 years of age, recently in talking with the Gly-Cas Man who is daily meeting crowds of local people at the Phoenix Drug Co., 348 DeSiard street, where he is introducing and explaining the action of this valuable new medical discovery.

"This new remedy is the first to give me the results I had been in search of," continued Mr. Goodwin. "For more than 30 years my system had been accumulating poisons and each day I was growing worse. My stomach became disordered until I simply could not eat anything that would agree with me. Indigestion attacks were unbearable at times and often my stomach soured, too. I got but little sleep. I was so restless and was worn out each morning, had no energy to do anything it seemed. My kidneys finally were affected and rheumatic pains settled over my body, adding to my already uncomfortable condition. All these years I was compelled to take different kinds of medicines but they all failed in my case and at my age I had about given up hopes of any medicine being able to help me—but once Gly-Cas was given an opportunity in my case it soon proved its outstanding merit—and today I am feeling fine."

"Little did I realize any medicine could be so wonderful," continued Mr. Goodwin. "For the first time in years I can now eat the foods I wish without any ill effects afterwards, sleep fine the entire night through and feel refreshed and full of energy each morning. Even those dreadful rheumatic pains have left me and those poisons are eliminated from my system. Gly-Cas did more for me than I ever hoped for and every sufferer should benefit from this great medicine."

The Gly-Cas Man is daily meeting crowds of local people at the Phoenix Drug Co., 348 DeSiard street, where he is introducing and explaining the action of this valuable new medical discovery.

ELECTRIC MAID POPULAR PLACE

DeSiard Street Shop Has Distinction Of Serving Public 24 Hours A Day

Serving the public with a 24-hour bakery trade every day of the year is a distinction held by the Elektrik Maid Bake shop, 404 DeSiard street.

This well-known establishment never closes its doors, and breads, cakes and pastries may be obtained there fresh and piping hot from the ovens in the evenings after 5:30 o'clock, and in the mornings from 2 o'clock to 10 o'clock.

Bakers of the establishment are experts in their profession, and often are called on to make cakes and pastries for special functions, such as weddings, parties and other social events.

One of the most popular services rendered by the bakery is its service to fishermen, swimming and picnic parties. An entire meal for an outing may be secured from the establishment, which operates in the same building in addition to the bakery a complete delicatessen department, restaurant, soft-drink and ice cream fountain, and tobacco and candy counter.

Two things are necessary for a successful picnic, the right location and the right kind of food. Nature provides the first requisite and the Elektrik Maid Bake shop saves the women of a picnic party the inconvenience of baking bread and preparing sandwiches in a hot kitchen. Many tasty and deliciously palatable picnic foods to use in making sandwiches with Mrs. Primos' Pride bread may be obtained from the establishment.

Whether or not the weather is favorable for a picnic, a family enjoys its meals to a greater extent and thrives when its dining table is set with bread and other products from the Elektrik Maid Bake shop.

Success Lies In Failure

You have heard it said that nothing succeeds like success. Wrong again. So many of those old sayings can not stand the test of analysis. They sound good but mean little.

The fact is that nothing fails like success, and that nothing succeeds like failure. In a certain sense, success is but an incident of failure, and more often failure comes from success. Sounds illogical, but that has nothing to do with the fact.

Persons who succeed do so only because they master failure after failure. Do not imagine for an instant that successful persons have been successful all the time. If they are successful, it is because they have risen on failure upon failure—failures of which perhaps you knew nothing.

Some persons strike it lucky and think they are successful. Then they go down and wonder what it is all about. You can never be a success unless you can learn to conquer defeat.

In any really vital matter you will be defeated if you can be defeated. And you will be kept in a state of defeat if you can be kept there. If you can not stand a tumble from the agreeable state of success into the painful state of failure without losing your nerve, your confidence, your determination and your initiative, you might as well get ready right now to kiss success good-by, for the chances are it will quit you.

We learn by our failures. We learn infinitely more from failure than from success. Nobody ever learned to skate except by sitting down hard many times. It is through our blunders that we learn to be skillful. It is through our errors that we learn to avoid errors. That is the reason an inexperienced person should begin on a small scale. If you are going into the chicken business without knowing anything about chickens, start with six hens, a rooster and a lot of government pamphlets and other literature on chicken raising. Give a chicken novice a thousand hens and he will lose them.

"You can't fool me," said an old man, wise in his ways. "I've been fooled too often." He had become wise through having been fooled. Failure had made him successful.

Where do you suppose the wisdom of the ages comes from—the wisdom of everything under the sun? It comes from failures—millions upon millions of failures. It came from finding out how not to do millions upon millions of things in millions upon millions of ways. There is a lot of twaddle in all this talk about instructing us only in the positive vein and not in the negative vein. "Teach us what to do," it is said, "and not what not to do."

Nonsense. It is just as important to know what not to do as it is to know what to do. Teach a child to plant his feet squarely on the stepping stones crossing a creek, but teach him also not to step on a water moccasin coiled on one of the stones. Not for nothing are the ten commandments written mostly in the negative.

A certain amount of failure is better for us than continued success. Unqualified success would make a man a conceited jackass—imagining himself the equal if not the superior of whatever gods there be.

NOTHING BUT DREAMS

There is something rather pathetic about the election of a white-haired old refugee in Paris as "Hetman" of all the Don Cossacks now scattered throughout the world.

Driving taxicabs, acting as waiters or porters, or working at any kind of jobs they can get, these remnants of a once-proud breed find it hard to forget. So they continue as best they can to keep up the old forms and the old ways. By a world-wide mail ballot they have chosen Count Grabbe as their Hetman, and presented him with the "boulava" staff that was once the symbol of supreme power over the wild horsemen of the Don.

And the 67-year-old man could only say to the 2,000 followers who witnessed the empty ceremony, "I have no plans, only dreams."

Even that is something. There are people who have lost even their dreams. They are the people really to be pitied.

PREMIUM ON COMPETENCY

"If democracy is to endure," remarks Dean Harno, of the University of Illinois law school, "it is fundamental that it insist on placing responsibilities in competent hands."

The wisdom of this observation cannot be seriously disputed. Representative government is dependent to a large extent on personnel. When legislators and executives are characterized by easy morals, inadequate training and inefficiency not to say downright corruption, public affairs naturally become subject to all manner of vicious influences.

The difficulty is, of course, to induce high class men to run for public office and then to get the voters to support them. These goals, however, must be constantly sought if popular control of governmental institutions is to be permanently justified.

More Truth Than Poetry

A ROAD TO HAPPINESS

I'd like to own a trailer,
A cozy little trailer,
In which to park
When falls the dark,
And stars are in the sky.
I'd hitch it to my flivver
And roll past field and river,
And by the shore
Where breakers roar
And curls up and cry.

Through long, bright days I'd wander,
Here, there and over yonder;
Down country lanes,
Across green plains
Or past an emerald lawn.
And when the summer twilight
Shone softly through the skylight,
And not a bird
Or bug was heard,
I'd seek my rest, and yawn.

Why speed along the highways
When down the pleasant byways
A man may find
Content of mind
And watch the world go by?
Far better own a trailer,
A tidy little trailer,
And find success
Of care—and peace
Beneath a summer sky.

Peace Sets Its Price

By BRUCE CATTON

For a people so anxious to keep out of war, we Americans do singularly little thinking about the price of remaining at peace.

We talk as if war were something that nations went into absent-mindedly. We assure ourselves that since the overwhelming majority of Americans don't want another war, we shall be able to stay out of it simply by an exercise of the will.

By talking and acting that way, we help to pave the way for a repetition of what happened in April, 1917.

What we need to understand is that peace has its price. It isn't something you can have by just wishing for it, in this modern world. You have to prepare for it, plan for it and make sacrifices for it.

George Soule, editor of the New Republic, discusses the price of peace in a recent issue of his magazine. He points out that sales of American goods to warring nations, visits of American business agents to war capitals, loans of American money and the presence of American ships in war zones got us into the last war and would almost certainly do the same thing in the next.

The one remedy, therefore, he adds, is to follow a different course. "If we give up the old conception of the 'freedom of the seas' and do not try to protect our ships or the goods they may bear to the belligerents," he writes, "if we do not attempt to guard the interests or lives of our citizens in the war zones, and if above all we prevent the growth of war trade with the belligerents by embargoing all loans and all shipments of contraband to them, most of the economic complications that entangled us in the last war will not be given a chance to weave their fatal web."

There, then, is the formula; simple, but expensive. Shall we have the nerve, as a nation, to apply it when that next European war breaks out?

It would mean, for instance, depriving our south of a market for half of its cotton, and our northwest of a market for half of its wheat. It would mean depriving our great industrial districts of the chance to grow rich and prosperous—the chance, also, to end our unemployment problem—out of war orders. It would mean refusing to let all the idle ships in our harbors go back to gainful employment.

In simple English, it would mean turning our back on the certainty of a year or more of top-speed prosperity.

It can be done—if we want to do it badly enough. It can't be done at all, however, if we fail to count the cost in advance. Unless we realize that remaining at peace in a world that has gone to war will call for sacrifices right out of the old pocketbook, we shall get into the next war just as we got into the last one—and for the same reasons.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—For whatever it may be worth—and perhaps it's just one of those strange things the August heat has a way of producing here—the impression has been growing around this town that Herbert Hoover is most likely to be the Republican candidate against Roosevelt in 1936.

You can still get a violent argument against such a possibility almost anywhere. The point is that it's only recently anyone here has taken Mr. Hoover's chances of renomination seriously.

There's even some kind of a movement on for a G. O. P. ticket of Hoover and Lindbergh. Can't tell yet who is promoting it or how important it's likely to be.

A seasoned political writer, who has been making political bets for years and never has any holes in the seat of his trousers, was around the Press club the other day offering even money on Hoover's nomination. (Yes, your correspondent took $5. of it.)

Norris, Coughlin Influential
The Hoover talk seems largely based on the ex-president's recent activity and belief among some politicians that he will win by virtue of a divided, deadlocked field. Col. Frank Knox of Chicago is currently considered the chief threat to Hoover's hopes. But don't pay too much attention to this hot weather speculation. Wait for the first primaries next spring.

An observer just back from a western trip reports a genuine revival of Republican hopes and an epidemic of factional fights between Democrats in many states. He says Senator George Norris of Nebraska and Father Coughlin have more popular influence than any other two men in the middle west.

Mr. Hopson at Ease
Mr. H. C. Hopson on the witness stand is a more pleasant sight than some of the other Wall Street big shots—such as Charlie Mitchell and Albert Wiggin—who have appeared before senate committees to squirm or bluster. The mastermind of Associated Gas & Electric neither squirms nor blusters.

He is very fat, as you know from the newspapers, with an arrangement of eyes and nose which reminds you of a fat little bird. He wears a white suit, light blue shirt, and polka-dot blue tie.

He answers all questions with apparent candor and good humor, in a full-throated but slightly nasal drawl which often becomes vigorous. Sometimes Mr. Hopson seems a bit bored, but he has a dry sense of humor and seems most of the time to be having a lot of fun.

Multiplying Millions
Many observers were of the opinion that Hopson is smarter than any member of either committee. If you couldn't tell by listening to him, you'd know it because he and J. I. Mangan own and control the whole $900,000,000 A. G. E. system through an investment of $28,318, because the Federal Trade Commission says the "write-up" in the system's securities was $264,140,616, because the system invented a bond issue which matured in the year 2040, because Hopson probably is the only man who understands the complicated structure of 262 companies covering 23 states, because Hopson knows how to control your home town power company through as many as 10 layers of holding companies, and because A. G. E. figured out how to issue debentures convertible into stock at the company's option—a process by which you can avoid receivership in case you don't pay bond interest.

Hopson, who played hide and seek with the committees and who made millions in a depression during which dividends weren't being paid, knows how to delight an audience. Many progressives sitting there thought he was a hard-boiled pirate, but they liked him. Progressives are always having trouble like that.

"I used to be a bureaucrat down here myself," giggled Mr. Hopson, "so I know something about it."

Back in 1906-08, Hopson served two years as a lawyer with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Lights Of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—A lot of us city fellows went up to the little town of Goshen, N. Y., the other day to see the Hambletonian Stake, which, for harness racing, is the Kentucky and English Derbies rolled into one.

There were about 40,000 people there, most of them dressed up in store clothes and driving big shiny automobiles so that you couldn't tell the farmers from the Wall Street brokers. The main difference was that the city slickers from Broadway and Park Avenue were losing their money betting on horses they didn't know anything about.

The ladies of the Congregational Church had a big tent where they served mid-day dinners and were doing so much business that they probably will be able to buy a new pipe organ. Nearby that was the auction pool run by Eli Crutch, who has been following the trotting races since he was 8 years old. Also there were seventeen bookmakers' booths where you could bet on individual heats. A few slick city bookies had come to Goshen to get in on the easy money, and first thing they knew they were losing their shirts to the natives, who get them all muddled up in their odds.

Gamblers On Deck
Over by the railroad track, just outside the park, a man was running a three-card monte game and not doing any too well with it, either. The forge of the itinerant blacksmith was throwing sparks, and so were the cigars of excited trainers and drivers as they gave the sleek trotters their final workouts.

People waited in lines to reach the tables at Henry's restaurant and the Orange Inn, and men stood five deep at the bars as they talked of the amazing gelding, Greyhound, and Lawrence Hanover and Tilly Tonka, and of great trotters of the past—Goldsmith Maid, Guy McKinnin, Dan Patch, and Hambletonian himself, after whom this racing classic was named, and from whom 90 per cent of modern harness horses are descended.

Some early arrivals, out of lingering bucolic sentiment, walked a few blocks to the 90-year-old half-mile track of the Harriman family which made Goshen the Epsom Downs of the trotting sport. Under two great oaks in the center field there are buried some of the most famous sires and dams. The ancient stables were filled with horses and sulkeys—the overflow from William H. Cane's Good Time Park, where Grand Circuit meetings now are held.

Rich Scenery
Nearby were Cane's Good Time Stables, as luxurious quarters as any horse ever has seen. Now, though, it and the adjoining lawn were filled with visiting millionaires, farmers, prominent horsemen, society folk. New Jersey's Governor Hoffman and B. J. Reynolds, the tobacco man from North Carolina were two who seemed to know all about the records and anecdotes of harness-horseflesh. Caterers and regiments of waiters used the immaculate stalls as pantries from which the traditional luncheon was served, and the owner and E. Roland Harriman were hosts.

Your correspondent hadn't seen a trotting race since his attendance at the Douglas County fair in Kansas, which was too long ago. And so I had forgotten—if, indeed, I ever knew—that a race is not a race, but a "match" and that a match is trotted in three heats, with the best average determining the winner.

I learned, too, that "scoring" has nothing to do with totting up averages, but is the term used for the flying start of a heat. They go back to get into approximate position, and come forward together at a gradually accelerated pace, looking for the starter's signal. If they don't get it they must return and try again—sometimes for an hour, which is rather trying on the nerves.

Veterans Score

But it is a great thrill when they are let go. Then you hear a swelling thunder of hoofs, and the peculiar chirping cries of encouragement that the drivers make, and the mounting roar of the crowd. One of the drivers I saw was Will Caton, who drove the trotters of the late czar of Russia and still wears the imperial colors. Another driver was Doc Parshall, an Indian veterinarian, who won the Hambletonian in 1934.

But the winner this time was a third old-timer, Sep Palin, who cracked his whip over the Kentucky-bred Greyhound. Trotting is a sport of veterans. Many a 70-year-old driver has brought in a winner and some of the great four-legged champions have been money-makers at 18 and 19.

go six thousand feet up its rocky side is easy, but to tell about it, is, unfortunately, impossible.

There is a towering mass, covered with ice and snow, towering upward to a sharp point. From that point, you are told, there once poured fire, smoke and lava. Now it is white-capped and as quiet as a gray old man telling how wonderful he used to be.

You find it hard to believe the old man, and you find it hard to believe that the mountain, now holding in a fork on its side, a glacier, with ice one thousand feet deep, was once a roaring volcano.

YOU CANNOT tell about a mountain, it is too big. You cannot even believe, although you know it to be true that a 14,000-foot mountain in proportion to the earth's diameter is not as high as a slight roughness on the skin of an apple. The earth is more nearly round than any apple or orange, with all its peaks, Mount Everest included.

ONE THING you can say, and will say, after seeing Shasta, close by. Man is a vain creature, and it does him good to look at a mountain that stood a million years ago, and will stand a million years hence, as it stands today. The sun's light changes and flashes on the snow slopes, and still lights the mountain top when forests and men below are in the after-sunset shadows.

Man needs to be rebuked for his littleness, and comforted with the knowledge that his struggle will matter little one thousand years hence. A mountain does that, for him.

critics. He would, he said, employ the same words if he were "addressing a convention of the youth of the Republican party."

Hitting again and again at those he said were "united in standing still on the same old spot," he spoke in general terms of a need to improve social conditions, health and security, financial and economic machinery and government. He did not refer directly to any of the work of the adjourning congress.

"Facts are relentless," he said. "We must adjust our ideas to the facts today."

As the president spoke, movie men ground away at him from a glass-enclosed booth designed to prevent outside noise from creeping into his microphones. Newspaper cameramen were others in his direct audience in the soberly tinted oval room.

Including his final "challenge" to "the youth of America of all parties," he said:

"Let us carry on the good that the past gave us. The best of that good is the spirit of America. And the spirit of America is the spirit of enterprise, of readjustment, of improvement, above all a spirit in which youth can find the fulfillment of its ideals. It is for the new generation to participate in the decisions and to give strength and spirit and continuity to our government and to our national life."

The president, at one point, recalled "back to the horse and buggy days."

"The rules that govern the relationship between an employer and an employee in the blacksmith's shop in the days of Washington," he said, "cannot, of necessity, govern the relationship between the 30,000 employees of a great corporation and the infinitely complex and diffused ownership of the corporation."

His "horse and buggy" reference was made at a press conference at which he criticized the supreme court's overthrow of the NRA and hinted at the possibility of a new constitutional amendment.

Continuing from the "blacksmith" analogy, he spoke then of the need of labor being allowed to choose its representatives to "bargain collectively in their behalf." And next of the modern need for protecting investors in huge corporations who might otherwise "be exploited" without their knowledge.

The original concept of credit control for financing the economic life of a nation of 3,000,000 people, he said, naturally would not be adequate for the United States today, therefore making "constant development" necessary. He then turned to improvements in social life, citing efforts to better slum conditions, and recalled his own experiences as a member of the New York state legislature in 1911.

"The reforms, however, for which we were condemned 24 years ago," he said, "are taken today as a matter of course. And so, I believe, will be regarded the reforms that now cause such concern to the reactionaries of 1915."

He asserted people had learned they can carry their burdens effectively "only by cooperation," he added: "Let me emphasize that serious as have been the errors of unrestrained individualism, I do not believe in abandoning the system of individual enterprise."

He then spoke of the needs of government, asserting "government today requires higher and higher standards of those who would serve it." "More party membership and loyalty," he said, "can no longer be the exclusive test. We must be loyal not merely to persons or parties, but to the higher conceptions of ability and devotion that modern government requires."

After a final slash at the "forces of reaction" and the "Tories of the world," he came to the end of his address with these words:

"Therefore, to the American youth of all parties I submit a message of confidence—unity and challenge."

PUBLIC FORUM

REBUKE FOR MR. HOOVER

To the Editor: We note that Mr. Hoover has Rip Van Winkled back into publicity by asking President Roosevelt some questions about a famous document concerning which he seems to have some undue apprehensions.

This Mr. Hoover was once president of these United States, which fact some of us have been trying hard to forget; but since he has essayed to ask President Roosevelt some questions, it would seem pertinent to recall some of those unpleasant memories of the years, 1920-21-22 and 23, in which he (Mr. Hoover) figured so prominently "just around the corner."

It will be recalled that in those dark and dismal years, when the whole country had sunk to the deepest depths of depression, misery and despair, there came a voice over the radio out of this darkness and despair, in December, 1931, which said, "This is Herbert Hoover, president of the United States, speaking before the United States Chamber of Commerce." On this notable occasion Mr. Hoover gave assurance that the depression was just about over and that prosperity waited for us "just around the corner"; that he was at a loss to know what had brought us into this terrible state of affairs, but just so soon as the situation cleared up he would appoint a commission to find out how it all came about—a promise to lock your garage after your automobile has been stolen and driven out of the country.

It will also be remembered that it was about this time that Mr. Hoover began running for a second term as president, and continued running, but did not "get around the corner" until March 4, 1933, where, instead of finding this promised prosperity, he found instead practically all the banks in the whole country either closed or ready to close their doors.

He found also a mandate from the people to "go back and sit down," where he has since been, no doubt, reviewing the 3 R's (not the 3 R's of old, reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic), but Republicanism, Republican rule, and Republican ruin.

When one contemplates for a moment the governmental wreck and ruin turned over to the present administration by Mr. Hoover on March 4, 1933, it would seem that he should be the last man in the United States to essay to ask President Roosevelt questions about something he (Hoover) couldn't handle successfully, or know just what it was all about, even if the questions were pertinent (which they are not) much less question that imply some "supposed and indefinite" change in our national constitution to be made by President Roosevelt, as if he (Mr. Hoover) didn't know that any change in our constitution is made by the people and not by the president and his appointees.

Such silly questions and unfounded apprehensions on the part of Mr. Hoover show him without an argument or a defense of his own position other than the RRR—Republican rule, Republican ruin, and a denunciation to the plain of that class of criminal lawyers, who, having no testimony to offer in defense of their client, try to weaken the state's prosecution by asking its witnesses such questions as, "How long have you been out of jail for stealing?" "Have you quit beating your wife?" etc.

And in conclusion I wish to say further, that he reminds one of the thing-um-bob, described in a little verse—author unknown—which runs as follows:

"A thing-um-bob sat at even tide,
On the shores of a shoreless sea;
Expecting an unexpected attack
From something it could not foresee."

BRITISH TO PLACE SHIPS AROUND SUEZ

VALETTA, ISLAND OF MALTA, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The cruise program which will bring the cream of the British Mediterranean fleet to within almost overnight striking distance of the Suez canal, by Sept. 1 was announced here officially today.

The warships will leave Malta Aug. 29 and will be concentrated in a tight, small ring ranging from the actual entrances of the canal and within the canal to points from 150 to 400 miles from the Mediterranean entrance.

The biggest concentration will be at Alexandria, Egypt, where the ships Revenge and Valiant, the first and third cruiser squadrons, the aircraft carrier Glorious and other warships will assemble.

The first destroyer and first submarine flotillas will remain at Malta. Coincident with the announcement of the fleet movement it was denied officially that the fleet would be strengthened.

In addition to the assignments to Alexandria and Malta other units will proceed to Suez, Port Said and Ismailia, which are the Red Sea and Mediterranean entrances and a point midway in the canal respectively.

Ships will also be stationed at Haifa and Acre on the Palestine coast and Famagusta, Larnaka and Limassol, all in Cyprus 250 miles from the canal.

No Adriatic ports will be visited in what is rather prosaically described as "the existing cruise program."

ETHIOPIANS START DIGGING TRENCHES

ADDIS ABABA, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The Ethiopian army began hastily digging a system of trenches along the Italian frontiers today, hopeful of staying the expected thrust of Benito Mussolini's Fascist warriors.

Emperor Haile Selassie brought home graphically to the population the danger of war from the skies.

"When you hear warnings abandon your homes and flee," the proclamation said. "Aircraft will seek out crowds massed on constructions. Run to the woods, spread out and hide."

This warning is given at the present time when everything is quiet in order that you need prepare in advance to carry out instructions."

In the event of an air attack, it explained, "three cannon shots will be fired from the palace. Factories will sound sirens, churches will ring their bells ceaselessly. Six cannon shots will be fired when the attack terminates, whereupon return to your domiciles."

Foreign military advisers who went to the border by air are directing the construction of trenches. This manner of warfare previously was unknown to the fierce Ethiopian warrior, who relied on barricades of loosely-piled stones.

The nation is preparing for a supreme emergency, despite negotiations in Europe to avert a war.

Fired by a wave of patriotism, chiefs of various tribes are creating a national war fund. They are donating their gold and silver ornaments and precious stones which for generations have adorned saddles, shields and trappings of their horses and mules. Many animals have harnesses covered with hundreds of silver dollars.

In order to acquaint the populace with aircraft, the emperor's personal airplanes are flying daily over the capital hidden among eucalyptus trees.

The British legation started construction of accommodations for 125 British Indian troops, arriving in a fortnight to supplement the legion guard.

About 100 French, Greeks, Indians and Germans are leaving for Djibouti.

ITALIAN WAR GAMES START TODAY

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, BOLZANO, Italy, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Mussolini's mighty army rolled up its big guns near the Austrian frontier and his generals reviewed their final orders today in preparation for what officers said might be the most significant war games in history.

The purposes of the maneuvers which brought 150,000 fighting men into this area were both military and political:

1. To furnish a dress rehearsal for what may be war in east Africa.
2. To show Germany that Italy is ready to act in Austria despite her troubles with Ethiopia.
3. To try out Italy's new "celebrity divisions" which, her generals believe, will put an end to trench warfare.

Thirteen years of Fascism had made Italy so military-minded that this sector throbbed with the movement of tens of thousands of troops without noticeable effect on the busy life of its inhabitants, most of whom are of Austrian origin.

Officers participated in the maneuvers with particular intensity. They believed they might have to put in practice in east Africa the tactical orders they received.

In preliminary movements designed to determine the position of the "Red" and "Blue" armies when the big war game begins Sunday morning, the "Red" army, instead of waiting for the "Blue" to attack, drove the "Blue" line back to a new position between Bolzano and Trento.

CONGRESS OKES PLAN TO INSURE PEACE FOR U. S.

sent a reversal of traditional American policy in permitting the president wide discretion in conducting international affairs, calls for an outright ban on shipments of arms and munitions to belligerents until February 29, 1936, two months after the next congress convenes.

It also makes it unlawful for American ships to carry arms or implements of war to any port of a belligerent or to a neutral port for transshipment to a warring nation. And it gives the president discretion in restricting use of American waters by belligerent submarines and travel of American citizens in war zones and on ships of belligerents.

Senators Johnson, Republican, California, and Connally, Democrat, Texas, joined 75 others in voting for it. Connally said he did so because it was a "gesture" toward peace; Johnson because it marked a "triumph for the international isolationist and the doom for the internationalist."

Senators Gerry, Democrat, Rhode Island, and Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, cast the opposition ballots.

It was the booming voice of the husky Democratic leader—Robinson of Arkansas—that warned the world America will not go to war "to settle European controversies." He took the floor to reply to the interview yesterday by Pope, a member of the foreign relations committee, forecasting possible war for America.

He explored the statement and then read a cablegram from Pope explaining it was not intended as official, but merely represented his personal views. Pope repeated also he was not representing anybody in an official capacity.

Although seeing no "rebuke" to Pope in the La Follette resolution—the Wisconsin senator also denied this was the intent—Robinson banged his desk with his fist for emphasis and asserted he did not "see any advantage to be gained by any private citizen or official at this time giving publicity to the theory that the senator expresses."

"Such statements were calculated to prove harmful," he said, adding sharply.

"If I have a correct estimate of public opinion, sentiment everywhere is in favor of doing everything possible to keep this country out of war, to maintain the peace of our people. 'We want no war,' he shouted as packed galleries looked on intently. 'We want no wealth gained from war. We want peace, and we do not propose to go to war to settle European policies.'"

Expressing the hope that newspapers would give equal prominence to his statement as they did to Pope's, Robinson said:

"If any European nation insists on the theory that this government or its resources either of man power or wealth will contribute to the adjustment of European controversies other than by peaceful suggestions for action, they are being misled."

"muddy the waters" with the accusation that the "kingfish" is seeking to annex Mississippi to his Louisiana domain through his "share-the-wealth" clubs in this state.

What reaction the Long controversy has had upon the minds of the voters is a matter that can be determined only by the verdict of the ballot next Tuesday.

The campaign has embroiled Mississippi's junior United States senator, Theodore G. Bilbo, who has been speaking three and four times daily for the past week, lauding Huey and attacking Johnson as a "tool" of Huey Long, whom the senator has denounced in no uncertain terms.

Senator Bilbo's wife, taking an opposite view, strongly endorsed Johnson and in a statement issued through the Johnson campaign headquarters, charged her husband with "insincerity" in his support of White, who she said was "rich."

TAX BILL SENT TO WHITE HOUSE

devoted a third of his message to a detailed argument for the imposition of new taxes upon persons who receive inheritances in addition to those already levied on estates.

Passing on accumulated wealth from generation to generation these days, he argued, was as out of line with general ideas as was the succession of kings to the 13 colonies in 1776.

The house agreed. But the senate bucked and the final bill included no inheritance taxes. It was understood, though, that the president would sign the bill just the same.

In its final form, the bill would increase the surtaxes on that portion of all individual net incomes over $50,000. The present rate, for instance, is 30 per cent on that part of the income between $50,000 and $56,000. The new bill increases that to 31 per cent.

On that part of income between $100,000-$200,000 the present surtax is 59 per cent—the highest rate. The new bill raises the levy on that to 73 per cent, and applies a maximum 75 per cent tax to all income over $55,000.

At present, $50,000 of an estate is exempt from taxes, and the first $10,000 over the exemption is taxed 1 per cent. The new bill drops the exemption to $40,000 and boosts the initial rate to 2 per cent. In place of the present maximum of 60 per cent on that portion over $100,000, the bill makes it 70 per cent on amounts over $50,000.

Gift taxes are raised to equal three-quarters of the estate rates.

At present, all corporations pay 13 3-4 per cent on their net income. The new bill replaces that with a graduated tax of 12 1-2 per cent on the first $2,000, 13 per cent on the income between $2,000-$15,000, 14 per cent on $15,000-$40,000 and 15 per cent on all over $40,000.

Under existing law, corporations are allowed a 12 1-2 per cent profit on their adjusted declared value. On profits over that, they pay a 5 per cent tax. The new bill lets them re-declare that value and permits a 10 per cent profit without taxes. On profits from 10-15 per cent, the new tax is 6 per cent; on profits over 15 per cent, the tax is 12 per cent.

Corporations now are allowed to deduct from their net income all dividends received from other corporations. Under the new bill, they are required to include in their taxable income 10 per cent of such dividends.

Likewise, each corporation now pays a $1 tax on each $1,000 of capital stock. The bill boosts that to $1.40. The president lost one other point in the bill. He objected to letting corporations deduct from their taxable income moneys contributed to charitable organizations. Congress wrote into the law a provision permitting such a deduction up to five per cent of the total taxable income.

Aroused house members formally

SENT TO WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(P)—Seven major pieces of legislation went trotting down to the White House today at the prodding of congress' desire to adjourn. They were:

An extension from October 31 to March 31 of the time in which President Roosevelt may cancel ocean mail contracts.

Approval of interstate compacts to restrict oil production.

A ban against gold clause damage suits after January 1.

A new method of liquor control.

The $250,000,000 tax measure. Imposition of a six months' embargo against the shipment of arms to belligerent nations, and six other neutrality provisions.

The much disputed ban against certain forms of utility holding companies.

notified the senate that unless it rescinded its action the house would allow the whole bill to die.

Equally stirred, senators talked of withdrawing the adjournment resolution previously adopted, under which a sine die adjournment would have come automatically at the close of business tonight.

Indignant senators found, however, that they were stymied in fighting the house, because they had already passed the adjournment resolution and sent the papers of notification to the house.

If they should ask the house to return the adjournment papers so they could be reconsidered, the house could refuse, and instead adjourn sine die which would force the senate to adjourn.

So serious was the situation that Vice-President Garner, Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, Speaker Byrnes and Chairman Buchanan, Democrat, Texas, of the house appropriations committee gathered in a hurried conference to seek a solution.

Buchanan in an impassioned speech on the floor a few minutes earlier, asserted the senate provisions had increased the total in the house bill from $93,000,000 to half a billion dollars.

"Some weeks ago," he said, "I made a statement that I was going to stand for a retrenchment of expenditures. Four or five days ago I made the same statement when the deficiency bill passed the house.

"Gentlemen, I'm going to keep the veil."

Before he went into the conference of leaders, Buchanan asserted flatly that the deficiency bill was "dead" for the session.

Asked what would happen to funds for the president's social security plan, $76,000,000 of which were provided in the deficiency bill, Buchanan remarked:

"Oh, the president can find money somewhere else for that."

Among the appropriations in the deficiency bill were:

$76,000,000 for administration of the social security law.

$13,000,000 for a permanent agency on soil conservation.

$600,000 for the rail retirement board.

$300,000 for administration of the Guffey coal bill.

$200,000 for operation of the alcohol control administration.

$25,000 for administration of the neutrality act.

An indefinite appropriation for carrying out the Bankhead cotton act.

Other items in the bill included $100,000 for senate investigations; $150,000 for the District of Columbia; $60,000 for sea food investigation by the food and drug administration; $350,000 for maintenance of the steamboat inspection service; $300,000 for an addition to the McNeil Island penitentiary; $60,000 for a study of railroad retirement problems; $100,000 for continuing work on the Mt. Rushmore memorial; $75,000 for holding the world power conference in this country in 1936 or 1937; $5,000 for a commission to study plans for celebrating the 400th anniversary of the DeSoto expedition; $150,000 for salaries in the federal trade commission.

LOCAL RESIDENTS HURT IN MISHAP RETURN HOME

Three local women, Mrs. J. T. Bryant, her daughter, Miss Kate Bryant, and Miss Ellen Peavy, daughter of L. H. Peavy, were returned to their homes yesterday from a sanitarium at Minden, where they were carried Thursday afternoon after suffering injuries in a head-on collision between a truck and an automobile on the Dixie-Overland highway near Minden.

Mrs. Bryant was the most severely injured. She suffered an injury to her head and neck, cuts and bruises about the face and body and a dislocated ankle. Her daughter suffered lacerations on the face and limbs, and Miss Peavy received severe lacerations.

The accident in which they were injured took place when a truck driven by W. R. Shadow, 60, of Minden, was said to have gone out of control and swerved and struck the car head-on. Shadow was badly injured. Miss Bryant was the driver of the automobile.

EIGHT-MILE PAVING JOB ACCEPTED BY COMMISSION

An act of acceptance between the Louisiana Highway commission and Nelson Brothers, contractors, covering approximately eight miles of asphalt paving extending from about a quarter-mile east of Chatham to Eros, was filed yesterday at the office of the Ouachita parish clerk of court.

After a flash of lightning the air remains illuminated for about 1-2000th of a second, special photographs reveal.

PRESIDENT SIGNS NEW FARM BILL

consumers in increased prices nor to the producer in decreased prices.

The processor would have to file a claim with the commissioner of internal revenue and a transcript of hearings and findings of the commissioner would constitute the court record when suit was filed.

The president is authorized to impose an import limit on any commodity found to be interfering with the effective operation of the farm program.

Thirty per cent of customs receipts under the tariff laws—estimated at $90,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually—may be used for premiums on exports of farm products, indemnifying losses on exports, paying additional benefits to farmers in connection with the adjustment program, and diversion of farm commodities into channels into which they would not go ordinarily. Cotton would be exempt from this provision.

Price-fixing, except as to milk, is forbidden.

The bill also is designed to: Extend the cattle purchase act and provide $10,000,000 to be used with unexpended balances to eliminate diseased cattle.

Let the president use for public purposes submarginal lands acquired with work relief funds.

Extend the Bankhead cotton control and Kerr-Smith tobacco control acts for two years with approval of producers.

Enact a similar potato control measure, providing for production quotas and taxes on production in excess of quotas.

Put into operation the so-called "ever normal granary plan," authorizing the government to acquire agricultural commodities pledged as a security for government loans and to make payments "in kind" to producers who cooperate in the adjustment programs.

NEW EMERGENCY LAWS ARE ASKED

President Urges Congressional Leaders To Preserve NRA Advantages

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(P)—In a surprise message to congressional leaders tonight, President Roosevelt asked for legislation at the next session to preserve "such social and economic advantages" as were gained in NRA and other emergency legislation.

The chief executive in letters to his lieutenants on Capitol Hill asked house and senate committees to begin to formulate the legislation in the fall so that a "well considered program" could be presented at the opening of the session in January.

He told them he would call representatives of industry, labor, and consumers into conference during the recess in an effort to reach an agreement on the best means of accelerating industrial recovery and eliminating unemployment.

Until then, the president urged industry to avail itself of legislation enacted at this session permitting voluntary agreements covering wages, hours, child labor and unfair competitive practices. He warned that investigation showed "serious impairment" of standards since abandonment of NRA codes.

The letter was sent to Chairman Harrison of the senate finance committee, and Doughton, of the house ways and means committee, which handled the NRA legislation. It took most of his advisers on Capitol Hill by surprise.

AMERICAN YOUTHS CLEARED BY JAPS

Suspicion Of Photographing Fortified Zone Is Deemed Unfounded

TOKYO, Aug. 24.—(P)—Japanese gendarmes said today two young Americans had been cleared of suspicion in connection with the alleged photographing of a fortified zone from the American freighter Golden Mountain.

The two, identified as Philip Mass, a Stanford university graduate, and William Felix, received official permission to resume their journey to Kobe from Tokuyama, Rengo News agency dispatches said.

Following a second examination of the freighter in Tokuyama harbor, where it has been held at anchor, gendarmes officers said their suspicions of willful lawbreaking through photography of the fortified Bungo straits had been virtually removed.

The freighter probably will be released shortly, they added.

The gendarmes said they found and confiscated aboard the ship a small camera and three rolls of exposed film belonging to a member of the crew. The pictures were amateurish, they said, indicating espionage was not intended.

The Americans had been sought because they left the freighter at Tokuyama. They were said to be returning to the United States from Lungnan university, Canton, China. Suspicion of authorities were directed to the ship because it steamed directly toward Tokuyama through the fortified straits instead of using the more traveled route by way of Yokohama and Osaka.

REDS ROUT BLUES IN WAR MANEUVERS AT NEW YORK CAMP

WITH THE FIRST ARMY NEAR PINE CAMP, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(P)—

With tanks, planes and smoke, the first division of the New York-New Jersey "Red" army today sent the entire "Blue" New England army into retreat.

The "Blues," outnumbered, sent out frantic calls for reserves to stem the overwhelming tide.

At the same time the 44th division drove back the 26th Massachusetts division on the west to the heights just below the Indian river and the 27th division held the center of the line against which both flanks were being pushed.

Tanks, screened by smoke, first broke the "Blue" lines on the heights east of Sterlingville and then changed their line direct to the westward overpowering the detachments of Vermont "Blues" on historic "Hill 300" while the regulars of the first division drove their enemy out of "Hell's Corners" in the village itself in hand to hand fighting.

GIANTS SCORE 8 RUNS IN SECOND TO STOP CUBS

LEIBER CLOUTS TWO HOMERS IN NEW YORK RALLY

Leaders Win, 9 To 4, As Cardinals Beat Brooklyn Again, 10-7

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The Giants found themselves with their backs to the wall in the National League pennant battle today as they braced themselves against the Cardinals in a game that was expected to be a slugfest.

A tremendous spurge of home runs hitting in the second inning routed three Chicago pitchers and put the game away. Hank Leiber without further ado, Hank Leiber led off with a homer and slammed another before the inning ended, tying a major league record. Although the feat has been performed on a good many occasions, Leiber was the first to do it since 1923.

In addition to those two swats—the first made off Tex Carleton with empty bases, the second off Clyde Shoun with one aboard—Mel Ott belted his 25th circuit drive of the season with two on to recapture the National League lead from Wally Berger of Boston. Roy Parmelee, Giant starting hurler, tripped.

In all the Giants rapped Carleton. Roy Henshaw and Shoun for seven hits, good for 18 bases, to make up their biggest single inning of the season before Fabian Kowalki, finally checked the carnage. He touched for their other tally in the fourth.

The Giants' lead over St. Louis remained at one game as the Cards defeated Brooklyn, but their margin over the Cubs was increased to three games.

CARDS RALLY TO WIN
BROOKLYN, Aug. 24.—(AP)—The Cardinals again took the hard way in their pursuit of the New York Giants but they came through in the ninth after trailing most of the way, beat the Dodgers for the third straight time, 10 to 7, and held their place a single game behind the league leaders.

The Dodgers built up a big early lead, driving Paul Dean to cover in three innings, then the Cards got to work on Ray Benze and tied the count at 6-6 going into the eighth, only to fall behind again.

Linus Frey's double and Joe Stripp's single gave Brooklyn another run in the eighth and a 7-6 lead, but Van Mungo, who had replaced Benze at the start of the seventh, failed to hold the lead. Pinch Hitter Bill DeLancey singled, Pepper Martin bounced a double off the right field wall, and Jack Rothrock was purposefully passed to load the sacks.

Munko managed to retire Manager Frankie Frisch for the second out. But Joe Medwick, who had already belted a homer, drove in the tying run when he beat out a single to short. Frey made a great diving stop of the drive to prevent further damage.

RED HOT RACE

That National league race has developed into the kind of dog-fight that brings smiles to the mugs of magnates whose favorite theme song is the merry click of the turnstiles. It's a knock-down, drag-out affair between the Giants, Cards and Cubs and the fans are willing to pay to sit in on it.

The boys on Broadway still favor the Giants at 2 to 3 but the manipulators figure the Cardinals will knock off Mr. Terry's crew if the Giants start west with less than a three-game lead. And the Cubs are still given better than an outside chance to slip in at the finish.

New York, perched at the top this morning with a full game lead over the Cards and three games ahead of the Bruins, has one more game with Chicago, three with the Pirates, two with the Dodgers and four with the Phillies before leaving the Polo Grounds for their final swing through the west. The Cards return home on Sept. 2, after finishing their series with Brooklyn and tackling the Phillies, Pirates and Reds in that order.

If the Giants have less than a three-game lead when they depart for the west, they're likely to find themselves also-rans when it's all over. That is, unless Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons returns to carry his share of the pitching burden. Freddie is expected to rejoin the club around Sept. 1 and if he can win four games on the western swing he might turn the tide in Terry's favor.

Over in the American league it looks like the Tigers are a cinch, particularly after the impressive showing of Roxie Lawson, their latest hurling acquisition, yesterday. This youngster, who was winning his fourth victory of the season as a member of the seventh-place Toledo club last week, blanked the Red Sox with five hits, besting the Great Grove in a beautiful hurling duel. If Lawson can take his turn as a starting pitcher, the Tigers may finish ten or twelve games in front, despite the fact that they face a strenuous campaign through the east in September.

SHORT AND SNAPPY
Football enthusiasm has reached a new peak at Louisiana Tech. Eddie McNamee and his rollicking sophomores are causing it. With a new concrete stadium, lights and a McNamee-coached team that will be out there with lots of the old college try, Tech fans have plenty to brag about. We saw that stadium for the first time the other day and it's not hot stuff. That big press box caught our eye, too. Jim Malone is also expecting big things, footballly speaking, at Northeast Center. Jim will have a real squad this year and the Indians are bound to go places. . . . If Malone's guards come through, his team won't have a weakness. Here's hoping the Indians draw the crowds a good team deserves.

Frank Kennedy thinks Mickey Cochrane pulled a big boner when he sent Schoolboy Rowe back at the Yankees Tuesday after the big boy blanked 'em Sunday. And Frank usually has the right slant on baseball matters. . . . If the Lakeside club's Labor day golf tournament doesn't go over in a big way, Kirk Touchstone and Shep Girault will be the two most disappointed men in Monroe. Indications are that it will be the most successful golf event ever held in these parts. . . . Prioleau Ellis, new Lakeside club champion, went up to El Dorado last week and won the first flight championship in the annual Old Belt tourney.

Why doesn't Charlie Bruscato match Ernest Kelly and Rudy Strongberg? That's the question wrestling fans are asking. It would be a swell match. . . . An important announcement concerning Louisiana Tech's coaching staff should be forthcoming any day now. It's long overdue. . . . Bill Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh club, is going to clean house after the current campaign. . . . Football experts will write for the Morning World this fall are Bernie Bierman, Jack Sutherland, Tuss McLaughry, Wallace Wade, Jimmy Kitts, Biff Jones and Bill Spaulding.

And we'll operate our weekly guessing game, also. . . . Paul Kemmer, former Ouachita junior college coach, is one of the applicants for the coaching job.

Nine years ago a well set up figure shivered slightly as the inevitable fog came up out of the North sea and was blown across the English channel. Hands cupped with grease applied layer after layer of the goosy substance over her form even as she tried to pierce the mist with determined eyes. The waves rolled in and broke on the sands of Cape Gris Nez as they murmured and sang and again, "You can't do it! You can't do it!"

Twenty miles across the foam-flecked sea were the chalky cliffs of Dover. They could not be seen, but once within sight the doughty swimmer figured she could reach her goal and be the first woman swimmer to accomplish the feat. Countless others had tried and failed. Even her first attempt finished in like manner. But to those who dare comes success. A champion holder of twenty-nine swimming titles was not to be denied.

If Buddy Myer leads the American league in batting, Clark Griffith will present him with a gold medal. Goose Goslin was the only Washington player who ever copped the batting crown. Goose turned the trick in 1928. . . . More than 10,000 pieces of mail have been received by Jimmy Braddock since he won the heavyweight championship. . . . Atlanta and New Orleans are staging a great fight for the Southern league leadership. Atlanta is setting new attendance records, while the crowds at New Orleans are mighty slim. We'll take Atlanta for that reason. . . . Eddie Morgan, Polican infielder, will take his third trip to the majors next season. On his first two tries, Eddie was a first baseman, but he'll be a second sacker this time.

LABOR DAY SKEET TOURNAMENT PLANNED

Many Entries Expected In Event At West Monroe Club

The Monroe Skeet club will sponsor a Labor day tournament in which at least 150 marksmen are expected to participate, it was announced yesterday.

The local club was recently established and many shooters have completed in the bi-weekly events. Skeet shooting has become unusually popular throughout northeast Louisiana during the past few months and many out-of-town shooters will enter the tournament here on Labor day.

Clubs have been organized at Oak Grove, Olla, Winnboro, Wisner and other towns in this section and shooters from these clubs are expected to enter the competition in West Monroe.

A number of West Monroe merchants have donated prizes to be awarded during the tournament, and Monroe merchants also will be asked to assist in staging the event, it was said. A list of the prizes, with the donors, will be announced this week.

The West Monroe club will hold its regular Sunday shoot today and the public is invited to attend. The Labor day shoot also will be thrown open to the public, it was announced.

The Fighter Wins $10,000 Grand Union Hotel Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP)—The Fighter, winner of three straight races for Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Milky Way farm at Arlington park, today won the $10,000 Grand Union hotel stakes at Saratoga. Ogden Phipps' White Cockade was second and Sharp from the Wheatley stable third in the field of fourteen.

Held at 4 to 1, The Fighter lived up to his name as he ran second round command at the three-quarter mark, and then pulled away to finish with one and one-half lengths to spare over White Cockade. The latter, running coupled in the betting with Sharp as the James Fitzsimmons entry, stuck his head in front at the three-quarter pole but was unable to hold his advantage and just managed to beat his staminate by a half-length.

The victory was worth $3,700 to the Chicago owner of The Fighter, which now has won five of his six starts.

just because the waves—and the experts—said it could not be done! "Trudy" did it! The message flashed across the seas and Americans had just reason to be proud of Gertrude Ederle, the girl who refused to say quit when begged not to attempt the unequal struggle against unfeeling, unthinking chilling waves, which at times were high enough to sink a sturdy boat.

Trudy was in the water 14 hours and 31 minutes. She negotiated more than thirty miles across the wind swept waters to emerge just below Kingsdown, England, and walk unaided up the beach while the few villagers cheered her to the echo. But Miss Ederle could not hear them. The wash and hammering of the waves against her ear-drums deafened her so that she could only drink in the joy of her success by the gladdening eyes and admiring smiles of proud Britons who marveled at her feat.

Two little row boats accompanied Miss Ederle on her history making

LAKESIDE MEETS MUNY CLUB TODAY

First Intra-City Match Of Season Scheduled At Country Club

Golfers of the Lakeside Country club will meet Municipal Golf club players in an inter-city match over the Lakeside course this afternoon. It will be the first match of the season between the two local clubs.

The first foursome will tee off at 1:30 o'clock. Shep Girault, Lakeside pro, said yesterday, with foursomes following at intervals of five minutes.

The feature match of the program will find Prioleau Ellis, new Lakeside club champion, and Shep Girault, playing Dr. R. T. Harberson and Winnie Cole, Municipal club professional.

Last Sunday the Lakeside club defeated McGuire Park club members in a close match.

Following are the pairings for today's match:
Wesley Shafro and Cramer Haas, Lakeside vs. Dr. T. A. Brulte and Harry Taylor, Muny.

Morton Braswell and Robert Guerrieri, Lakeside vs. Jack Selig and Milo Mattinson, Muny.

Tip Schier and Jack Kelley, Lakeside vs. L. E. Ducote and Jordan Barton, Muny.

J. H. Trousdale and W. M. Washburn, Lakeside vs. K. L. Weldon and C. A. Morgan, Muny.

There's a different hue to the 1935 finish, however, for after the regularly-scheduled warfare closes there comes the Shaughnessy playoff, with the four clubs composing the first division engaging in a post-season series for the championship.

It seems safe to predict that Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville and Memphis, favorites from the start of the campaign for the playoff, will be the entries in the Shaughnessy struggles.

Pels, Crackers Reenact Pennant Battle Of 1925

Two Teams Now Waging Fight For Southern League Championship

By Kenneth Gregory
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
ATLANTA, Aug. 24.—(AP)—New Orleans and Atlanta, in a furious fight for the Southern association leadership as the teams square off for the finish drive, are reviving memories of the close battle between the Pelicans and the Crackers in 1925.

Ten years ago Atlanta, after being nosed out by Memphis in 1924 by a margin of four games, fought its way to the league pennant in a great finish, outdistancing New Orleans by a game and a half.

Today the 1925 race is being reenacted. The Crackers and the Pelicans, safely out in front of the other six teams, are staging a nip-and-tuck struggle for first place with the odds about even.

Singularly, Memphis and Nashville are acting similar parts in the show of 1935 that they did a decade ago. Then, it was the Vols who won the decision for third place by a single game. Today they're deadlocked for the third position with a percentage of .523. The odds here seem about even, too.

There's a different hue to the 1935 finish, however, for after the regularly-scheduled warfare closes there comes the Shaughnessy playoff, with the four clubs composing the first division engaging in a post-season series for the championship.

It seems safe to predict that Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville and Memphis, favorites from the start of the campaign for the playoff, will be the entries in the Shaughnessy struggles.

Chattanooga, however, cannot be counted out definitely, since the Lookouts are only 2-1-2 games behind Nashville and Memphis. And 3-1-2 games back of Chattanooga rests Little Rock with an outside chance.

Birmingham and Knoxville are so far back that they cannot be considered threats. The remainder of the schedule is highly favorable to Little Rock, which has 20 games on the home lot, starting tomorrow, while Chattanooga faces a stretch of 19 contests on the road.

In view of the traditional baseball theory that the chances favor a team playing at home, the remainder of the schedule gives Atlanta a slight edge over New Orleans. The Crackers have 14 more games at home and 11 abroad, while the Pelicans play 13 on the road and 11 at home.

Memphis has a good home stand of 14 contests, with only 10 on foreign fields. Nashville must journey for 14 games and play 12 on the home battlefield. So, the Chickasaws have a slight edge here over the Vols.

With 22 more playing days remaining, many opportunities are offered for a jumbling of the standings. But regardless of the finish, the first four teams will start the Shaughnessy firing two days after the curtain falls on September 15.

The Shaughnessy system calls for a playoff series of three out of five games, with the first-place club meeting the fourth and the second playing the third. Then the winners clash in a three-out-of-five series for the pennant and the right to meet the Texas league champion in the Dixie series.

Lefty" Shellock, former Big Six league hurler, will be on the mound for Waterproof, while Joe Holliday, Copiah-Lincoln junior college star, will be given the pitching assignment for Friday. Bob Fife, Waterproof high school football and baseball star, will

LAWSON ALLOWS BUT FIVE HITS IN BEATING RED SOX

Detroit Increases Lead As Browns Beat Yankees Again, 7-6

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—(P)—Roxie Lawson, Detroit rookie, chalked up a 2 to 0 victory over the Boston Red Sox today in his major league debut as the result of an error by Dahlgren, which provided the break in a tight pitching duel with the veteran Lefty Grove.

With the bases loaded in the sixth, the Red Sox let Goose Goslin's grounder roll through his legs, and White and Gehring scored the only runs of the game.

Each pitcher allowed only five hits, but Lawson issued five walks to Grove's one.

A crowd of 22,000 saw the game, which closed the series with Boston and gave the Tigers four victories out of the five games played.

INDIANS WIN LONG TILT
CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—(P)—Earl Averill's home run with one on base and two out broke a 0 to 0 tie in the fifteenth inning today to give the Cleveland Indians a 2 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Averill smacked the ball over the right field wall to score Glatzner, who was the thirteenth Indian to be walked by George Turbeville.

Lou Berger had singled and gone to second on Turbeville's third wild pitch of the game, but he was run down between second and third. Hudlin then filed to McNeil.

Nashville Club Buys East Dixie Outfielder
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 24.—(P)—The Nashville baseball club today announced the purchase of Jim Parks, young and highly recommended outfielder of the Jackson, Miss., club in the East Dixie league.

Business manager Jimmy Hamilton said Parks, left-handed hitter, would report at the close of the East Dixie season.

SEVEN UP FROM FROSH TO VARSITY AT TECH

These seven star backs are among the un-scored-on freshmen of last year who will be a big help to the varsity football team of Louisiana Tech this fall. They beat the Mississippi college yearlings at Tallulah, 13-0; the Junior Gents of Centenary, 6-0; the Normal Imps at Ruston, 46-0; Northeast Center of Louisiana State university at Monroe, 13-0; and the Louisiana college Kittens at Ruston, 26-0. The seven sophomores pictured above are: Carl Gardner, Shreveport; Herman Hewitt, Birmingham, Ala.; Don Darling, Fordyce, Ark.; Wallace Hanna, Minden; C. H. Wood, Fordyce, Ark.; W. H. ST. LOUIS, Aug. 24.—(P)—The Browns came from behind twice today and finally beat the Yankees out in the ninth inning, 7 to 6, to take the odd game of their series of five. The defeat, the 24th the Yanks have lost by one-run margins this season, put the New Yorkers eight games behind the league-leading Tigers.

Pat Malone, who pitched good relief ball after the Browns joined Johnny Broaca loose from an early lead in the fourth, weakened badly in the final frame. Jack Burns and Julius Solters nicked him for singles and the former scored when Red Rolfe juggled Ed Coleman's grounder a moment before forcing Solters at second. Sammy West followed with a long double to left center and Coleman slid home ahead of the throw to score the winning run.

Additional Proof
Bill Terry and Cronin did a great deal toward reviving the player-manager principle in 1933 when they lashed the New York Giants and Senators into a world series in their first year in command. Outwardly, Terry does not appear to be as aggressive as the other playing managers, but he is a splendid executive and sets a fine example for his athletes in the field.

While neither the Giants nor the Senators repeated the world series managers of last fall were players nevertheless—Frisch of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers.

If additional evidence was needed to prove that an inspirational player makes the best manager, Cochrane supplied it last year and this. And if there was any lingering doubt, it was dispelled by Dykes, who has kept the Chicago White Sox, who finished a slovenly last and 26 games out of first place in 1934, in the first division this season.

The standings columns of the two major leagues reveal why the Cleveland directors would like to uncover a Cochrane, Frisch, Terry, Cronin, or a Dykes. Six of the eight first division clubs are managed by active players, and the heads of the other two, Charley Grimm, of the Chicago Cubs, and Pie Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates, gave up performing regularly only this season.

Has Advantages
The manager in the thick of the battle has numerous advantages over the pilot who is confined to the dug-out and coach's box. He combines action with Dykes, who has kept the Chicago White Sox, who finished a slovenly last and 26 games out of first place in 1934, in the first division this season.

Teams reflect the individual characteristics of the playing manager. The Tigers, led by the dynamic Cochrane, carry chips on their shoulders. The outfields charge next hardest in the American league are Boston and Chicago, directed by Cronin and Dykes, who never give up.

One of the biggest faults of the Yankees, led by the complacent Joe McCarthy, is that they lose too gracefully. This as much as the loss of Frankie Crosetti seems likely to again cost them the flag.

The Cardinals are the most aggressive set of players in the game, which is chiefly to the credit of the ultra-aggressive Frisch.

Lazzeri and Myer might fail as managers. Star players frequently do. Managing a major league club is not a soft assignment.

Lazzeri and Myer were schooled under highly intelligent baseball men in the late Miller Huggins and Griffith, however, and one thing is certain. They'd never be fired for not trying.

CALIFORNIAN WINS PUBLIC NET TITLE

Elizabeth Deike Beats Lydia Kayser; Welch-McElvenny Win

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 24.—(P)—Miss Elizabeth Deike, tall and powerful-looking Pasadena, Calif., net star, flashed a warning to the women's tennis world here today when she annexed the municipal singles championship of the United States in straight sets.

Playing the same smashing, devastating sort of tennis with which she polished off all opposition up to the final round, Miss Deike completely overwhelmed Miss Lydia Kayser, Buffalo, N. Y., champion, 6-4, 6-2, to win the women's singles crown.

Miss Kayser, who yesterday supplied the major upset of the tournament by downing Mrs. Ruth Bailey Prosser, St. Louis defending champion, was helpless before the driving power and accurate placements which rolled from the Californian's racket.

A new men's doubles champion was crowned today when the brilliant Washington, D. C., tandem of Bernard Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, blasted William Hughes and Cecil Metz of Memphis, Tenn., in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

McElvenny, who had little success in the singles competition, was the dominating factor in the Washington team's doubles conquest. His steady but brilliant game more than balanced the sheer daring net play of Hughes and Metz.

The Memphis pair played a dangerous game in attempting difficult placements, a strategy upon which Welsh and McElvenny capitalized to forcing numerous errors.

Hughes and Metz drew rounds of applause from the large crowd with their sparkling net play and daring attempts at nipping the baselines, but the champion duo's more conservative tennis dominated the match.

Misses Esther Politzer and Constance O'Donovan, Detroit's champion women's doubles combination, marched into the title of that division with as little trouble as the other championship matches.

They conquered Misses Elizabeth Ducker and Frances Jacobson, St. Louis, Mo., 6-1, 7-5, exhibiting a superior type of teamwork.

Miss Deike, who came here as a virtual unknown, smashed her way through the tournament so easily and brilliantly that experts predicted a bright future for her in big-time tennis. Her driving volleys drove Miss Kayser breathless and paved the way for spectacular placements.

The 13th national public parks tennis tournament closes tomorrow afternoon after the men's singles championship, between Bernard Welsh, Washington's lucky defending champion, and William Schommer, big ten conference titlist from Minneapolis, has been decided.

Women Stars Are Defeated; Barnett And Williams To Finals

EL DORADO, Ark., Aug. 24.—(P)—Ed Barnett of Little Rock and Sterling Williams of Austin, Tex., seeded No. 1 and 2, fought their way to the finals of the tri-states tennis tournament here today as two big upsets occurred in women's singles matches.

Williams smashed his way to the finals with a victory over Lasker Ehlman, of Austin, Tex., after losing the first set, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Barnett had less difficulty in putting Bub Murphy of Shreveport, out of the way, 6-1, 6-4.

Marilyn (Sunny) McRae of Little Rock, seeded No. 4 among the women entrants, came back with a tremendous rally after losing a love set to Mildred Crowe of Shreveport, and won the second two sets 6-2, 6-3.

Lucille Daily of Saginaw, Mich., seeded No. 3, won over Charlotte MacQuiston of Dallas, seeded No. 2, 6-3, 6-2.

Daily and McRae will meet tomorrow in the final round of the women's singles play.

Mary and Charlotte MacQuiston of Dallas defeated Jessie Hart of El Dorado and "Sunny" McRae of Little Rock in a women's doubles match, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. The sisters will meet Helen Carney of Shreveport and Lucille Dailey in finals tomorrow.

Miss Carney and Miss Dailey won their way to the finals by defeating the team of Mildred Crowe of Shreveport and Miss Hatcher.

Macon Plans to Honor Memory of Stribling

MACON, Ga., Aug. 24.—(P)—Plans are under way to erect an eight-foot bronze statue memorial to the late William Lawrence (Young) Stribling, Georgia's most famous boxer, in his old home town.

Young Stribling, tall, handsome son of "Ma" and "Pa" Stribling, arrived at the portals of the heavyweight throne on several occasions but never made the grade. The ring career ended when he died in a hospital here a year and a half ago following a motorcycle crash stamped him as one of the cleanest fighters in the game.

He was the idol of Georgia and especially of Macon, where he lived with his parents and his wife and three children.

In memory of the youthful boxer, Macon intends to erect a life-like figure of Young Stribling in downtown Third Street park.

Marshall Daugherty, a student at Yale university, has been entrusted with creation of the statue.

Besides using hundreds of pictures of Stribling in making the clay casts, Daugherty, a 19-year-old Macon boy, employed five models. Two of them are boxers—one from Yale and the other from Syracuse university. Another was a member of the Yale rowing crew.

Daugherty says of the memorial: "I tried to make Stribling, himself—to express in a statue the high ideals for which he stood apart from his contemporaries—to make a hero in clay. I tried to mould something that would stand forever, even after Macon forgets him as a boxer."

Young Stribling's last fight was with Maxie Rosenbloom in September, 1933.

Young Stribling's old home town has commissioned a youthful sculptor to create a statue of the fighter. This is a model of the work.

Rabbit Backs Expected To Help Tulane Eleven

JACOBS, FABYAN WIN IN DOUBLES

Allison-Van Ryn, Budge-Mako Teams To Finals In Men's Play

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 24.—(P)—Helen Jacobs, America's top-ranking women's tennis player, registered two earned points today when she and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Brookline, retained their national doubles titles by turning back their U. S. Wightman cup teammates, Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., and Carolin Babcock, Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-2.

And those two were not needed for Mrs. Fabyan managed to sharpshoot a dozen placements against the charging Miss Babcock in addition to forcing most of the 28 errors marked against the slight, dark-haired girl from the coast.

The men's field reduced its championship play into a duel between U. S. Davis cup teammates, Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, who held the doubles titles in 1931 and were runners-up last year, gained the title round for the third time in six years by outbattling Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., and Henry Culley of Santa Barbara, Cal., for a 2-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 triumph.

As far as strokes were concerned, the veterans were outplayed by a wide margin by the brilliant youngsters, who won the Longwood bowl titles and were runners-up at the Newport casino.

Don Budge and Gene Mako, the Californian "Commers" selected for Davis cup service this year, were still smarting over last week's casino setback when they took the courts against Frank Shields and Frank Parker. The latter pair, with the exceptions of Parker's miscues on a few drop shots, played brilliant tennis, but their combined efforts were only good enough to land them on the short end of the 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 match.

HANK GREENBERG TIED FOR SECOND PLACE IN BATTING

Detroit Slugger Challenges Leaders: Vaughan Hitting .399

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(P)—Hank Greenberg, the 1935 home run king of the major leagues, and leader of his circuit in scoring, batting in runs and two-base hitting, continued to challenge for the American league batting title during the past week when he moved into a tie for second place in the close race.

Greenberg, leading just one point to his average, jumped up from fourth place into a deadlock with Buddy Myer of Washington, who was on top a week ago. They had .343 averages after Friday's games and were six points behind Joe Vosmik of Cleveland, who regained the lead after yielding for one week to Myer's hitting spurt.

In the national league the brief spurt which carried Arky Vaughan, the leader, well above the 400 mark for a few days, provided the week's big news. But Vaughan couldn't quite hold the pace and dropped back to .399 Friday, showing a two-point gain for the week. His leading rival, Joe Medwick, of St. Louis, dropped two points to .370.

England's Great Player Beats Alonso In Impressive Style

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 24.—(P)—Fred Perry, England's great amateur tennis player, gave a near-capacity crowd of 1,500 persons attending the annual intercollegiate court series between the east and west a sample of his prowess today by defeating Manuel Alonso, one-time Spanish Davis cup star, in an entertaining exhibition contest at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

Preparing for the defense of his United States singles championship at Forest Hills, L. I., next week, Perry downed the still dangerous Alonso, 7-5, 6-4.

The west took a 2-1 lead in the intercollegiate series, winning the doubles engagement and one of the two singles matches. Two more singles and two doubles will complete the show tomorrow.

Jesse Millman of Los Angeles, young Stanford university graduate, sent the Pacific coast into the lead in the opening match by outlasting the veteran J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, 4-6, 11-8, 6-3.

Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., evened the count by defeating Leonard Patterson, also of Los Angeles, 6-4, 10-8, and the west took the odd match as Patterson and Henry Prussoff of Seattle, Wash., downed Hall and Robert Bryan of Chattanooga, Tenn., 8-10, 10-8, 6-4.

In singles tomorrow Grant will meet Henry Culley of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Alonso will meet Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C. In doubles, Greg Mangin of Newark and Berkeley Bell of New York will meet Culley and Hines. Bill Winslow of Lawrenceville, and Jeff Podesta of Montclair will face the western team of Lawrence Underwood and Bob Nelson.

Off to a good start, the Ducklings led in the third inning 7 to 2. In the sixth inning Pollock tied the score 7 to 7.

MANY ENTRIES EXPECTED IN LABOR DAY TOURNEY

QUALIFYING ROUND TO BE PLAYED AT CLUB THIS WEEK

Biggest Entry List In History Of Tourney Seen By Officials

A number of entries already have been made in the Lakeside Country club's fourth annual Labor day tournament, indicating that the number of golfers who will compete will be the largest in the history of the local tournament, Shep Girault, Lakeside professional, announced yesterday. Despite the fact that the tournament will not open officially until next Saturday, nine qualifying scores have been posted.

Entrants may qualify any time this week, with next Saturday night the deadline. Municipal club golfers who play in the intra-city match with Lakeside members today may use their scores as qualifying scores for the Labor day tournament, Mr. Girault said.

The following, with their scores, are those who already have qualified:

J. L. Warren, 100; Vance Rhodes, 93; Ford Hines, 100; E. M. Watkins, 93; W. D. Moore, 101; H. A. McDonald, 95; D. Y. Smith, 87; J. B. King, 88; and J. M. Townes, 93.

The tournament officially opens next Saturday which has been designated as the date for playing the qualifying round. First round matches will be played next Sunday morning, with second round matches and first round consolation scheduled for Sunday afternoon. Semi-final matches will start at 8 o'clock Monday morning and second round consolation matches will begin at 9 o'clock. The final matches in all flights will be played Monday afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock. A putting contest will be staged Monday afternoon at 6 o'clock, with awarding of prizes at 7 o'clock.

Entertainment features include a dance for club members and tourney entrants at 10 o'clock Saturday night and a barbecue at 7 o'clock Sunday night. There will be no added charge for these features.

The last sixteen qualifying scores will comprise the championship flight. The next sixteen will go into the first flight, and so on until all entrants who turn in a score are placed in a flight, Girault said. Through a special arrangement with the City of Monroe, which will afford the Lakeside tournament committee the use of the Municipal course, every entrant is assured of a place in the tourney, regardless of the score he may turn in. In the event of an exceptionally large crowd, the extra flight matches will be run off at the Municipal course on the first day of the tournament, Girault explained. Transportation will be furnished players to and from the Municipal course. All semi-final and final matches will be played over the Lakeside course.

Prizes will be awarded the winner, runner-up and consolation winner of each flight and the medalist will be awarded a silver trophy. "These prizes have been purchased with careful thought," Mr. Girault said, "and will consist of golf goods exclusively, such as sets of woods, sets of irons, leather bags, etc."

Facilities of the large Lakeside clubhouse will be available for all entrants, it was announced. The golf course will be in excellent shape for the tourney.

The annual Labor day tournament usually attracts a stellar field of golfers and there always is keen competition for the championship. Fred Odum, Jr., of New Orleans, won the first tourney in 1932. Freddie Hans capped the title in 1933 and Wesley Shatto was crowned champion in 1934.

BASTROP ALL-STARS TO PLAY LOCAL TEN

A picked team of Twilight league players will meet the Bastrop all-stars, selected from the league there, in a game at Forsythe park Tuesday night, W. L. Weite, umpire-in-chief of the Twilight league, announced yesterday. The game will start at 8 o'clock.

The Bastrop squad has not been selected but it is expected to include the best players of the Bastrop softball league.

Following is the Twilight league team:

F. Bennett, first base; Strong, second base; Ulmer, shortstop; Richardson, third base; Elliott, left field; Marionneau or Welsh, right short; Hemphill, right field; Kitchens, center field; McNeill, catcher; Mitchell, pitcher, and Carter, McNeill, Thomas and I. Bennett, utility players.

The team is practically the same one which defeated the Monroes in the battle of Twilight league all-stars Friday afternoon.

An admission charge of ten cents will be made Tuesday night to defray expenses of the game.

Ellington And Davis To Stage Exhibition Shoot

Robert E. Ellington, assistant postmaster, and L. M. Davis, local post office inspector, will shoot a match at the West Monroe Skeet club this afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock. Both are good marksmen and much interest has been aroused in the match.

There has been considerable rivalry concerning the ability of the two postal officials and each claims superiority with the shot gun. The match today was arranged to settle the issue. Friends of both participants will be on hand and the public is invited to witness the exhibition of marksmanship.

THESE RACES ALWAYS FISHY

Horses, dogs, turtles, and now fish go to the races. The new sport has made its appearance on several Oregon rivers. The fish are put in boxes, such as those shown above, and dumped into troughs when the starter turns a handle. They trip a device at the end of the course, which shows the order of finish. Win, place, and show bets are made.

age, but his heroic effort was wasted when Jim Collins belted a double against the wall in right center to break up the ball game.

The game produced an odd dispute in the sixth inning. With the Dodgers ahead 6-3 and Collins on base, Virgil Davis, Cardinal catcher, smashed a hit out to right field. The ball bounded through an open door leading to the scoreboard, and was ruled as a two-base hit, although the Cards claimed it should have been a homer.

REDS BEAT PHILS TWICE

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—(P)—The Cincinnati Reds defeated the Phillies in both ends of a twin bill today and crowded up to a virtual tie for sixth place, 9 to 5 and 13 to 2.

Cincinnati won the first game by scoring 4 runs in the seventh inning and knocking Curt Davis from the mound. In the second the Reds scored nine runs in the first frame to go into the lead for the rest of the game. Thirteen Reds went to bat in that inning.

In the opening game Moore and Camilli of the Phillies hit homers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(P)—Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold took their places among great competitors in the Wightman cup matches.

Mrs. Fabyan, the Dresden china doll, hadn't won a tournament all season when she rallied her forces to account for more than one-third of America's points Forest Hills. After being badly defeated by Dorothy Round, the 100-pound Mrs. Arnold came back to keep the cup in this country by repelling the highly regarded Kay Stammers. The little women had that extra step when the chips were down.

Bunny Austin isn't considered an outstanding tennis player as internationalists go. Annually, the American players bank on repulsing the less formidable member of the British squad, but each time Austin comes through and proves himself little less capable than his illustrious running mate, Fred Perry. Austin has a way of stepping on the gas when playing for keeps.

Austin has the spirit that made the diminutive William M. Johnston an immortal of the courts.

Money players rise to the occasion. That famous spoon shot in the Master's tournament was the reward of Gene Sarazen's concentration and determination when battling for a prize. It is a grand competitive disposition that is carrying Walter Hagen along now that he is far past his peak.

Lawson Little has it to the most pronounced degree among the amateurs. The Stanford student is superb and relentless at match play. Guest has it in Polo; Howell in Football.

It was the dash and fire of Winston Guest that lashed the east's team to a surprise victory over the west's hard-riding polo squad a year ago.

Dixie Howell could pass like sixty and run like an aggravated whippet, but it was his keen desire to win that inspired what otherwise might have been an ordinary Alabama array last fall.

Howell wasn't as large or as good a running back as Red Harold Grange, but had all of the Wheaton Wonder's get up and go.

Football players like Cliff Montgomery, the 1933 Columbia quarterback, deserve a world of credit. Lacking the physical power of others, they more than make up the difference by perfecting timing and using what

ORLEANS TO HAVE NEW DOG TRACK

Greyhound Racing Near Crescent City To Be Resumed Aug. 31

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 24.—(P)—Dog racing is to be resumed in the New Orleans area August 31, said an announcement today by Jack Sheppard, general manager of the Arabi Greyhound association.

Sheppard said that a new track would be operated on the afternoons of August 31, September 1 and September 2 and on succeeding weekends.

The track is an oval three-sixteenths of a mile long and is now being completed on the site of the Arabi baseball park, in St. Bernard parish.

Dog racing was barred in Louisiana by an act of the legislature of 1928. Sheppard said in his announcement that locally-owned dogs would run in the races at the Arabi plant. Acquaintances of Sheppard said he had built and operated dog racing plants at Bermuda and at Galveston, Texas.

Mr. Sheppard said the company would be headed by Richard Ellis. He said his lawyers had advised him that his concern was "in the clear."

He said that the law says that the track "must not be less than one mile, if located within 15 miles of the city."

"Our lawyers agree that the law does not undertake to say how much of the track must be used for a race," Sheppard said.

"The track at Arabi," he said, "is a mile in length and includes a three-sixteenths loop near the old ball field. We are going to use the full mile for exercise and training the dogs and run the races over the three-sixteenths loop."

"Our purses are to be kept under $100 so as to be subject to the license law."

"To make sure there is no conflict," Mr. Sheppard said, "we went down to see the sheriff, Dr. Mercereau, and he thinks it is all right."

Ouachita Valley League

RUSTON AT BROWN

The Brown Paper mill club, battling for the second half championship in the Ouachita Valley league, will entertain the Ruston team at Brownville today. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Manager Herb Stead of the Brownies said yesterday that a postponed game with Fairbanks will be played at Brownville Monday afternoon and that the Swartz club, another team in the thick of the fight for the second half crown, will play at the Brown park on Wednesday.

All games during the remainder of the season will start at 3:30 o'clock. Stead said.

The pitching selections for today's Brown-Ruston game were not announced.

RUSTON TRIMS FAIRBANKS

RUSTON, La., Aug. 24.—(Special)—The Ruston ball club went back hit wild here this afternoon, running up a total of six two-baggers and 10 singles, in taking the Fairbanks Gassers into camp by a score of 15 to 6.

The game was played in place of regularly scheduled game of Wednesday, which was rained out.

Jimmie Davis, on the hill for Ruston, had very little trouble until after the locals had run up a big lead, when he let down some and allowed the Gassers to connect for eight hits. Only two of Fairbanks' runs were earned, however, since miscues at critical times by the local infield let four runners cross the plate.

"Smoky" Taylor and "Sport" Gratton led the onslaught on Ward and Traynor, each connecting for one double and two singles.

Money Players Rise To Heights In Tight Spots

force they have intelligently. The Illinois team of 1934 was studied with this type of athlete.

Barney Ross, the welterweight champion, appears ordinary against mediocre opponents, but more than matches the pace of the stars. Sammy Mandell, the former lightweight champion, and many others were the same way. The incentive had to be there.

Frish heads For Eighth World Series In 17 Years

If the St. Louis Cardinals beat out the New York Giants and Chicago Cubs in the National league race now entering the stretch, it will mark the eighth time in 17 years that the Cardinals and Red Birds.

Frish easily is the foremost money ball player of all time.

Frish's phenomenal record scarcely can be attributed to a series of accidents.

The Cardinals take their cues from their ultra-aggressive leader, The Deans, Bill Hallahan, Billy Delancey, Ripper Collins, Charley Gelbert, Pepper Martin, Leo Durocher, and Joe Medwick are imbued with the same ideas. The Cards have the verve of a varsity football team, as is exemplified by the plucky Gelbert playing on a leg shattered by buckshot.

As in the case of Frish and the Cards, the Detroit Tigers reflect the characteristics of their fiery foreman, Mickey Cochrane. There have been stronger clubs in both big wheels, but the Tigers are well-balanced and have the main essential. None of them speak about or would be content to finish second.

There is more to baseball than what shows in the averages.

Bobby Jones Says

One would think that a little reflection upon the number of shots he uses in bunkers would induce the average golfer to spend a little time learning to play out of them. But the truth is he won't. If he practices at all, he will devote his attention mainly to his driver and his putter. He will not realize that bunkers have perfectly legitimate places on a golf course, and that the shots from them are as much a part of the game as the play in any other department. Indeed, when one considers that the very best players hardly ever complete a single round without one or more visits to the sand, the importance to the average player of able recovery work should become apparent. From the beginning he may as well be convinced that he can never learn to stay out of trouble. He will have to learn to get out.

Sound Judgment Asses

Fortunately, the greater part of good bunker play is sound judgment, the exercise of which few of us will think ourselves incapable. Thus we may start with hope, for almost any kind of swing can be made to do it. The knowledge one must have which no one can give him is of his sand. This varies greatly from course to course, being, according to locality, coarse or fine, to varying degrees, and, according to weather, wet or dry. Since a successful bunker shot requires a nice adjustment of force to the resistance of the sand and the distance to be covered, the first need is for an intimate acquaintance with the sand. This means practice.

On the mechanical side, the main thing is to make certain of getting the club under the ball. It is a common mistake, as above illustrated in figure No. 2, to hood the club and hook down on the ball. The most usual result of this method is a half-slice, either over the green or into the bank of the bunker. The player in the other illustration, figure No. 1, with his club laid well back and the ball in front of the toe of his left foot is in position to play upward both the ball and the sand underneath it. An error of judgment or of hitting which causes his stroke to take too little or too much sand will not be likely to result disastrously. If too little, the ball probably will not go beyond the green, and if too much he will be hitting hard enough to be certain of at least getting it out of the bunker.

Take Few Long Chances

The expert player rarely permits a bunker to cost him more than one stroke. If any round he will expect to mis-hit a few shots, to miss a few greens. Bunkers do not excite him, because he knows what he can do from them. Unless the circumstances are unusual, he will take no long chances. His first thought is of avoiding any extension of the loss already discounted. Only after he feels certain of getting out will he begin to think about retrieving the lost stroke.

For the average golfer there should be but one bunker shot—the full blast. Refinements such as half-blows, cut shots, and chips should be left to those who have a fair chance to play them successfully. There is not one man in the above-ninety class who cannot reduce his scores by strokes merely by learning to get out of bunkers regularly upon his first attempt.

Gastonia Legion Juniors Win Eastern Title, 19-6

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 24.—(P)—The husky American Legion junior team of Gastonia, N. C., won the eastern baseball championship here today by overwhelming the Carrollton, Ga., team 19 to 6 before a crowd of more than 9,000 fans.

Golf Pros Seek Ruth For Exhibition Tour of Nation

Cleveland Tourney Demonstrated Bambino's Drawing Powers

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—George Herman Ruth, for years the most magnetic attraction in baseball, suddenly has become the biggest card in golf.

Ruth already has sufficient invitations to carry him through the winter. Promoters seek the Babe for a nationwide tour. It is suggested that Sammy Byrd, outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, be the old home run king's partner in such a venture.

McDonough is the second star college halfback to suffer an injury of this kind this summer. Phil Dickens, of Tennessee, broke bones in his ankle and tore ligaments in a meaningless amateur baseball game in Alabama in June.

Dickens is off crutches, but limps badly. The broken bones have healed, but the torn ligaments are still troublesome. The team physician says that there is no way to tell whether he'll be able to play until practice starts, but Major Bill Britton, new tutor of the Volunteers, plans to hold him out for the season unless he is right.

Tennessee men were confident that Dickens would bring additional America honors to Knoxville this autumn. As a sophomore in 1934 the running and passing of the powerful and speedy Dickens brought fond memories of Beattie Feathers.

Followers of the southern school cross their fingers when they hear that a Tennessee gridiron game is playing summer baseball. Gene McEver was deprived of what figured to be his finest year by a leg injury suffered in baseball.

Yankers Get Colgate Star

But to get back to Marty McDonough and Colgate. I dropped in on Andy Kerr, famous coach of the Maroon and White, just as he received the sad news. A message of the kind would send the majority of mentors into a blue funk, but, "It's a tough break for Marty, a fine kid," was Kerr's characteristic comment, as he packed his bags for a trip to Kansas. Little Andy isn't much for singing the blues on his own account.

McDonough is a senior, which probably means that he never again will lug leather for the Red Raiders of the Chenango. He was one of the most spectacular backs of the past two campaigns.

McDonough's misfortune concerns the New York Yankees almost as much as it does Colgate. It is to the Yankees that Marty is to report at the conclusion of his college course.

McDonough is tabbed as the best second baseman in the collegiate ranks. The Irish youngster swats the ball as hard as he rams a line. He was hitting .475 when the accident happened. Frankie Frisch followed the Colgate varsity around last season attempting to inveigle him into the St. Louis Cardinals' organization.

In addition to his football and baseball ability, McDonough has one of the sweetest tenor voices you ever heard.

Tulane and Iowa Toughest

Colgate lost 14 of 25 letter men by graduation, and the loss of McDonough on top of that causes Kerr to remark that the Hamilton institution's prospects for 1935 are just fair.

However, the 1934 Colgate team had similar prospects and came from nowhere to develop into one of the smoothest working arrays that Kerr has had in his half dozen years in the Chenango. If the 1935 outfit rises to the occasion as well as the one of 1934, which Kerr creations have a habit of doing, Colgate again will have a representative team.

Colgate's schedule includes Holy Cross, Lafayette, Tulane, Iowa, Syracuse, Rutgers and Brown. Kerr believes his combination's toughest contests will be with Tulane in New Orleans and Iowa at Iowa City. He also anticipates plenty of competition from Lafayette, Holy Cross, Brown, and Syracuse, the latter an ancient and legendary foe.

All-America men generally are selected from winning clubs, and Colgate has several who may rise to national prominence if the upper New York state school has another good season.

If Colgate goes places, Kerr expects Don Irwin, fullback, to contribute much to the cause. The coach also considers Ike Kern, a triple-threat back, all-America material. At the outset he will bank on Fortmann, right guard, and Wasieck, captain and tackle, to become outstanding linemen.

And just wait and see what little Andy, a pioneer with the lateral, does with this trip.

In ancient China, political prisoners sometimes were put to death by being wrapped in a fresh rhinoceros skin. The skin contracted as it dried and crushed its victim.

TIGERS OPEN GRID PRACTICE MONDAY

Light Workouts In Shorts Is Neville Program For First Week

Football practice will start at Neville high school Monday morning, with between 40 and 50 candidates expected to report for the initial workout. Coach Percy Brown announced last night.

Players are asked to report at the Neville gym tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The squad will work out in shorts for the first week, Coach Brown said, and candidates are requested to bring their shorts with them when they report for the drill.

Coach Brown said he expected a large squad to greet him Monday, and that the number probably will be increased after the first week of work.

This week the Tigers will take only light workouts, including calisthenics and other limbering-up drills. Heavier work will not be inaugurated until next week, the Neville mentor said. Uniforms will be issued Labor day.

The Tigers meet the strong Camden, Ark., Panthers in their first game, on Sept. 20, an early game, together with the fact that Coach Brown will have to rebuild his team for the coming campaign, has caused the Tigers to go to work a week earlier than usual, Coach Brown said. The opening home game will be against Minden. All Neville home games will be played at night at the Northeast Center stadium.

JACKSON ACCEPTS POST IN EL PASO

Manager Of Hotel Frances Leaves For New Business Connection

M. R. Jackson, for the past three years manager of Hotel Frances, will leave this morning with his family for El Paso, Texas, where on September 1 he will become manager of Hotel Hussman, the newest and largest hotel in the city.

Mr. Jackson has been engaged in hotel activities here since September 1, 1930, when he acquired control of Hotel Alvis as owner and manager. Later he sold out and on February 1, 1932, he assumed management of Hotel Frances which position he has held ever since.

During his stay in Monroe, Mr. Jackson has made an unusually wide circle of friends and he stated Saturday that it is with regret that he is leaving here and that the change is made only due to the fact that it comes in the nature of a decided promotion.

While here he has been identified with civic life, and has been active in the Lions club and other organizations. A large number of conventions have been in the past brought to this city through the assistance of Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Jackson's ability has been recognized beyond the confines of Monroe, as he is serving his fourth year as international vice-president of the Hotel Greeters' association, the largest hotel group in the country.

The hotel to which Mr. Jackson is going is owned and operated by the National Hotel association, owners and operators of 30 hostels located from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It has 350 rooms and is a 12-story building with the latest in modern hotel equipment.

The management of Hotel Frances, it is stated, will announce Mr. Jackson's successor here inside of the next few days.

CHAPTER VII

When Douglas Marsh's car had been brought to the curb at the Olympic Bowl and he and Jo had stepped inside, Marsh asked, "Would you like to ride around a bit before I take you back to the apartment?"

"It's a heavenly night for it," Jo admitted. "But—the truth is, I'm just a little tired. I think it's from the shock of being appointed the hostess at Crest Lake Inn. I know I won't believe it when I wake up in the morning!"

"In that case I'll telephone just to reassure you. Say about 9?"

Jo nodded. "I'm afraid I'll need the reassurance, Mr. Marsh."

They were soon before the Fendale, and Marsh hopped from the roadster to see Jo to the door.

"Really," Jo said, "I can't thank you enough for a delightful evening—and for the opportunity at Crest Lake."

"I didn't mean to make a business conference of it," Marsh laughed. "But I'm leaving for the lake tomorrow afternoon and I thought I'd better arrange everything tonight. Do you suppose you could come down day after tomorrow?"

"I'll see that your ticket is delivered to the apartment by tomorrow afternoon. And I'll make arrangements at Lytzen's for things to be charged to Crest Lake Inn. If they don't have just what you want, I'm sure they'll get it for you."

He held out his hand. "Good night, Miss Darian—but couldn't I call you Janet?"

"Janet?"

"Isn't that it?" he laughed. "I noticed the initials 'J. D.' on your hand bag at Brown's this morning, and I'm just guessing. Suppose you give me the right name?"

"It's Jo."

He smiled. "I like that . . . Jo." Once again he took her hand for the fraction of a moment. "Good night, Jo. I'll see you at Crest Lake day after tomorrow."

"Right," said Jo. "Good night."

Next morning she awoke with the first pink streaks of dawn, and lay absent reviewing the events of last night. Wide awake, she looked at her wrist. It was hardly 5 o'clock.

"Four hours until he telephones," she told herself. "And I actually won't be able to believe it until he does telephone."

But Jo Darian was too young and alive not to believe that good fortune is always a possibility. After a delicious stretch between the covers she leaped from bed and took a quick shower. Then, stepping into her mules and throwing a robe around her slenderness, she sat down to write her mother and her father. She knew that they would find it hard to understand just what had happened, so her letter to them was lengthy and involved, telling them the story from the time she had started to work for Brown until she heard the offer of still another position from the astonishing Douglas Marsh.

"He's really a very charming person," Jo wrote her mother, "and just because I know you're always worrying I want to tell you that Mrs. Marsh, his mother, is at Crest Lake. They say she's rather a forbidding person, so I doubt if there's much chance of my having an affair with a millionaire, even if I wanted to!"

Jo thought it best not to mention the matter of the new clothes. That would be a little difficult to explain to Mrs. Arthur L. Darian, who had very definite ideas about such things.

She had just finished addressing the envelope when the telephone rang. It was just seven—two hours before Marsh had promised to call—and Jo wondered who could be telephoning her at this hour.

It was Tubby; and just a bit excited. "What's this story I hear about your being at the Olympic Bowl last night with Douglas Marsh?"

"Well," Jo laughed. "It's true. You certainly get your news fast, Tubby."

"A bunch of us were in the University Inn last night when Babe Montgomery and Stanley Phipps came in from the Olympic Bowl. Baba was announcing it here and there in loud tones. She probably thought it would get to Bret eventually."

"It will, eventually," Joe said. "In fact, I'm going to tell him about it tonight. It was strictly business. I'm going to work for Douglas Marsh."

Tubby's gasp was audible over the wire. "What do you mean?"

Jo told her ex-roommate the whole story, and when she had finished Tubby could only exclaim, "Well, all I can say is that you must have four-leaf clovers embroidered on your scanties. I never heard of such luck!"

"Nor I," Jo confessed. "You'll have to spend a week at Crest Lake this summer, Tubby."

"I'll try my best. I finally got everything packed, and I'm taking the afternoon train for home," Tubby told her.

Jo explained the receiver after Tubby's reiterated promise that she would try to plan at least a few days at Crest Lake. It would be fun to have Tubby there for a while, Jo told herself. She was likely to get lonely with so many strangers about—all friends of Marsh, and therefore people with a lot of money, no doubt.

She'd really need some decent things to wear. Marsh had been right about that, and it would be part of her job to see herself well dressed. A day at Lytzen's would be like a dream come true, for it was the most expensive and exclusive establishment in the city. All Jo had ever bought there was a pair of gloves—and today she was going to order a complete summer wardrobe.

She looked at her watch again. Seven-thirty. She'd have time to dress and go out for breakfast before Marsh telephoned. To her faint discomfort she found herself looking forward to the sound of his pleasant voice. She wondered idly if already she were attracted by him, like any silly school girl; and then facing herself suddenly in the mirror, she denied this self-doubt hotly.

This morning she found a new and somewhat expensive restaurant for breakfast, treating herself to orange juice and cold sweet; to thin slices of toast with marmalade; and then an omelet as light as a feather—sipping it off with the best coffee she had tasted in ages. When she received her check without dismay Jo could not help but be amused by the sudden difference in her attitude. Yesterday she had been thinking frugally, while this morning she had deliberately sought the most expensive looking restaurant in the neighborhood of the Fendale.

Suddenly she thought: "Wouldn't it be terrible if I went back to the apartment and found a message from Douglas Marsh saying the whole thing was off?"

But when she reached the door of her apartment the telephone was ringing frantically. A little breathless Jo answered it.

"Good morning," Marsh said. "I was afraid for a moment that you'd run away from your new job—and me."

"Oh, no," Jo laughed. "I've just come in from breakfast."

"Well, I'm telephoning to tell you that it's still all perfectly true. It wasn't the music and it wasn't the cocktails. I'm sending over your ticket to Crest Lake this afternoon. And they're expecting you at Lytzen's."

"I'll be there," said Jo gayly. And then, as a pang of conscience struck her, "Oh, and Mr. Brown. Did you tell him?"

"I'm telephoning from there now. Everything's fixed. He thinks I've picked a splendid addition to Crest Lake."

"Please let me talk to him," Joe said. When she heard Brown's gruff voice on the wire she went on, "I hope you're not angry with me, Mr. Brown, but you see—"

"Sure," he interrupted her. "It's all right. I'm mighty glad you got a good job. I guess I owe you a morning's wages, too."

"You don't owe me anything," Jo assured him. "If I hadn't been in your office yesterday morning I'd never have had this chance. . . . Goodbye, and good luck!"

She turned from the telephone and walked to her window, looked down at the hurrying crowds below. For one dreadful moment she could not believe that this had happened to her, out of all the young women down there who wanted it to happen to them. If only Bret—

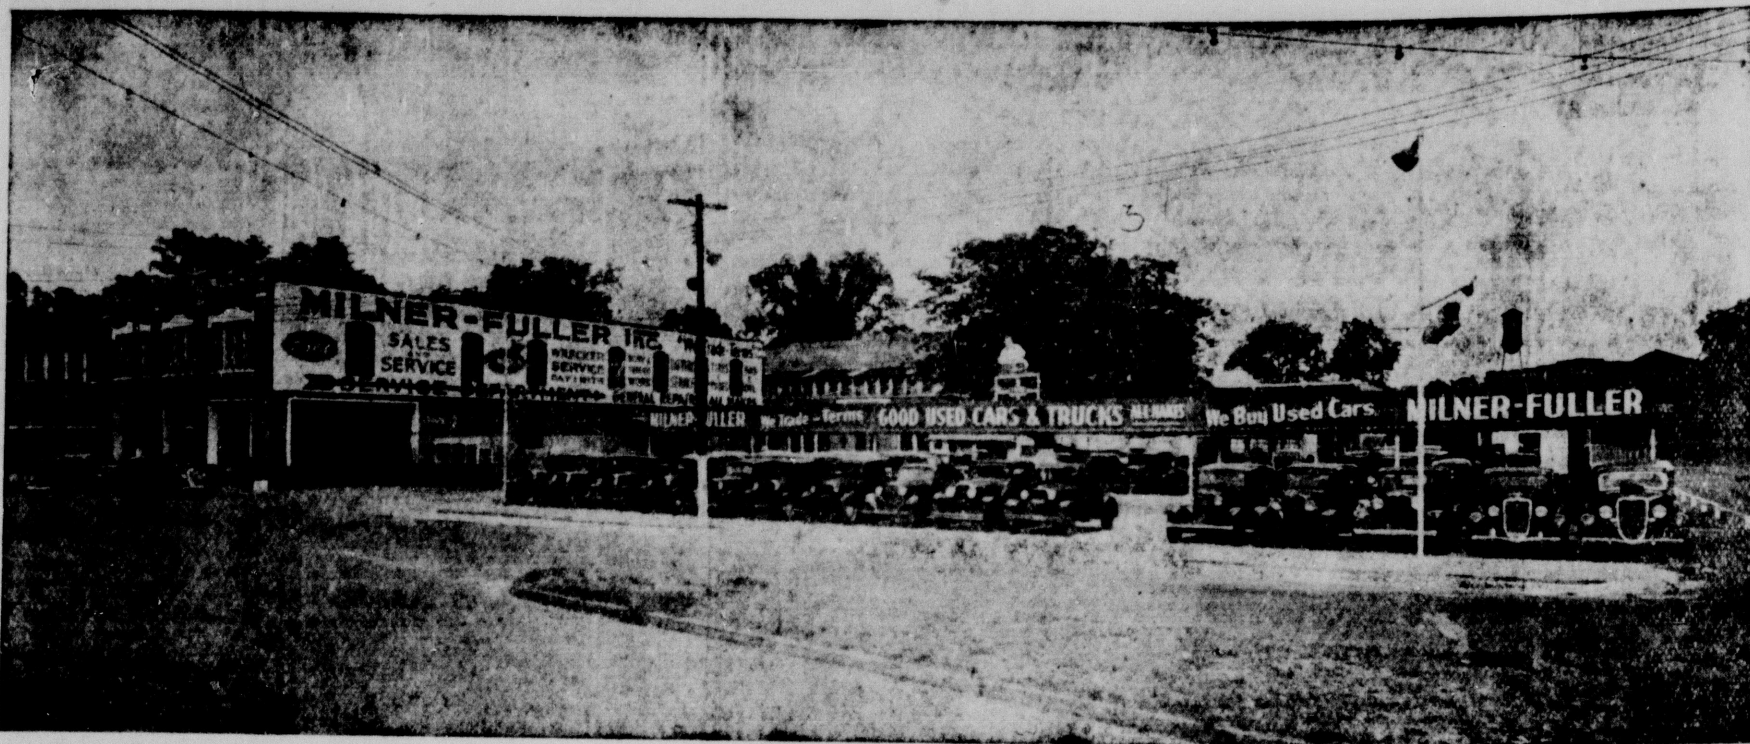

But Bret would be at Placid Beach. Jo lifted her eyes and saw, beckoning over the roof tops, the huge sign which crowned Lytzen's.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

USED CAR LOT COMPLETELY ILLUMINATED

Milner-Fuller, Inc., has completely lighted "The Big Lot," shown above. This new installation has made it possible for many of their customers who cannot shop during the day to see their large selection of cars and trucks at night.

GOOD USED CARS ARE ON DISPLAY

Milner-Fuller Lot Is Well Lighted For Customers After Dark

"The Big Lot" of the Milner-Fuller Motor company has one of the largest assortments of used cars that are shown in the city. It has fast become the popular place to buy a reconditioned used car.

All reconditioning is done right on the lot. Equipment has been installed in the rear for that purpose. An auto paint shop is operated and a complete mechanical division is maintained in order to put cars in good running condition.

The front of the lot is used to display the cars. An extensive lighting system has been installed which includes four large flood lights mounted on tall poles at each corner of the lot and additional lights have been strung around the lot. This added expense was made for those customers who could not find it convenient to shop during the day. The extra lighting facilities makes it possible to inspect the car just the same as in daylight. It has often been said that it is "a lot as bright as day at night."

"The Big Lot" is located on Walnut street next to the Milner-Fuller building. It has greatly improved that section of the business district and is in keeping with the Milner-Fuller policy of advancement.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to visit the lot and see the real values in reconditioned used cars that the local concern has to offer. Late models are on display at all times and a line of trucks may also be seen.

The clean and also prevents chipping in transportation.

J. C. Stovall, manager of the dairy, says that the cap has met with great approval and that his customers desire this added protection. Stovall's Dairy is the only establishment in the city that uses the "Klean Kap" in bottling their milk.

For the household, Mr. Stovall has pure Jersey milk and he also has Holstein milk which is recommended for babies by all leading physicians in the country.

Each bottle is sterilized before it is used and the dairy in general has the high regard of the state health board.

A brand new truck is operated to all parts of Monroe and West Monroe delivering milk only a few hours after milking. This superior service is offered with great pride by the Stovall dairy.

An invitation to inspect the dairy is extended to the citizens of Monroe and West Monroe by Mr. Stovall.

Mr. Harrison said that as much as three full days are given by his employees to put the water system back in first class shape. This kind of work has become a regular part of the business for the local concern.

A large stock of supplies are carried, such as parts for motors, generators, switches and other items required in such work.

The installation of industrial motors and wiring of large industrial plants, sawmills, etc., is also done by the establishment. M. S. Harrison welcomes any inquiries concerning electrical work, and will gladly furnish estimates for any job.

SALES ON STOCK MARKET ACTIVE

Losses Ranging From $1 To $3 A Share Are Noted In Many Issues

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(P)—A burst of selling in public utility stocks today cut other sections of the market from price moorings.

Many of the power company shares, particularly preferred issues, lost $1 to more than $3 a share. Losses of industrial stocks ran from $1 to $2 in many issues. Selling was so active in the late trading that the ticker fell in arrears.

Wall Street circles said further study of the compromise on the Wheeler-Rayburn Holding company legislation had prompted a fresh outburst of selling in the electric power issues.

On the other hand, some said that following its long climb, the market had jockeyed into a position which would have invited some selling in any case.

In the stock exchange, American Power and Light sank $1.50 a share to close at $6, and Public Service of New Jersey closed $1.50 a share lower at $40.50. In the curb market, Electric Bond and Share declined $2.87 to finish $12 a share.

A handful of preferred issues had larger declines, although selling of these stocks was not heavy. American Power and Light $5 preferred was down $2.25 a share, at $26.75. Electric Power and Light $6 preferred was off $3.50 a share at $16.50.

Included in a moderate number of industrial and railroad stocks which sank $1 to $2 a share were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Gillette, Jones & Laughlin preferred, Ludlum Steel, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Westinghouse.

In the commodity markets wheat closed 5-8 of a cent to a full cent lower at a bushel. Corn was unchanged to 1-4 of a cent down.

Cotton finished with net losses of $1.05 to $1.25 a bale, breaking through yesterday's lows.

9 CENT COTTON LOAN APPROVED

Lincoln Parish Farmers Vote Endorsement Of Governmental Action

RUSTON, La., Aug. 24.—(Special)—Led by three of the oldest men of Lincoln parish, 200 farmers of the parish, in a mass meeting at the courthouse here Saturday, voiced their approval of the nine-cent loan on cotton authorized by the president and Secretary Wallace Thursday. There was not a dissenting vote.

"Uncle" Alf Fuller, 83, "Uncle" Lum Berry, 78, and "Uncle" Jimmie Gaar, 72, all widely known farmers of the parish and all three of whom have made a success of their vocations, were among those who favored the action of the government.

One of them pointed out that while there was some disappointment among cotton growers that the loan was not fixed at a higher figure than nine cents, still the guarantee of twelve cents as a final settlement price for the 1935 crop was unquestioned evidence and proof that the "New Deal" administration is willing to continue its helpful attitude and service to the farmers, even in the face of a crop estimate of more than two million bales increase over the 1934 crop.

PLANS ARE MADE FOR SCOUT DRIVE

Finance Committee Sets Goal Of $5,000 For Annual Campaign

Initial plans for conducting the annual financial campaign of the Ouachita Valley Boy Scout council were formulated Friday night at a meeting of the finance committee in the Ouachita parish courthouse.

October 17-24 was chosen as the dates for conducting the campaign and a goal of approximately $5,000 was set. Efforts will be put forth, however, to raise more than that amount.

The actual budget of the council for the coming fiscal year is $5,015.38. The council has an indebtedness of approximately $2,500 and it is hoped that a sufficient amount above $5,000 will be raised to pay part of the indebtedness.

Further plans for the campaign will be carefully made and with the launching of the drive a concerted effort will be made to complete it within the designated week, a period shorter than the campaign period in past years.

Charles Miller of New York city, field executive of the national Boy Scout organization, will be here on the opening day of the campaign to assist in inaugurating it.

The initial meeting of the council finance committee was attended by Judge W. M. Harper, A. B. Clarkson, Sam Davis and Berney Oakland, all of Monroe, Robert Lane Fuller and V. A. Davidson, both of Ruston, Olan H. Black, council executive, of Monroe, and Frank W. Bradin, assistant regional executive of Memphis, Tenn. September 26 was set as the date for the next meeting when the chairman of the drive and other leaders will be appointed.

MUSIC COURSES PROVING POPULAR

Dean Colvert Anticipates Increased Interest At Local College

The music department of the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university, headed by Roger C. Frisbie, promises to be more popular than ever this fall, Dean C. Colvert, asserted Saturday. Advance indications are that the enrollment in this course will be far larger than it was a year ago, he said.

A two-year course is offered in theoretical music, piano, voice, organ, violin and in reed and bass instruments. An especially good glee club, band and orchestra will be maintained.

Public school music is being stressed throughout the state and many are anxious to qualify for music supervisors, Dean Colvert said. The musical faculty comprises in addition to Mr. Frisbie, Miss Florence Zeigler, instructor in piano, Miss Charlotte Davis, instructor in voice, Mrs. Wilma Frisbie, instructor in violin and Lowery Jefferson, instructor in reed instruments.

Dean Colvert announced that next Thursday he will start his trips to adjacent cities where he will confer with many prospective students.

The dance will start at 12:01 Monday, with a business meeting slated for 9 a. m. The street parade, in which all visiting bands and marching units will participate, competing for prizes, will take place Monday noon with the ceremonial Monday afternoon.

A handsome loving cup will be awarded the best marching unit in the parade, one to the grotto with the largest percentage of members registered, and one to the largest delegate miles to the convention.

The Hot Springs Chamber of Commerce will present prizes aggregating $600 at the regatta. Present officers of the Southwestern Grotto are: Henry G. Breneman, Paris, Tex., president; B. M. Monroe's delegation will leave in private cars and in a city bus. The latter will leave the Masonic temple at 6 a. m. Sunday. Stickers and whistles can be had at the desk at Hotel Virginia by delegates making the trip. A large number of stickers for windshields announce: "Teflis Grotto, Monroe, La., Wants You in 1936."

London has approximately 7,000 telephone operators.

It is estimated that 200 customers will be served. The line running east from Wisner for two miles is completed and serves two cotton gins and about 10 farms with light and power.

Still other extensions are planned for early fall by the company, according to A. O. Evans, division manager.

Dr. Charles E. Mohr, naturalist of the Reading, Pa., municipal museum, and his assistant, Kenneth Dearloff, arrived here yesterday afternoon to visit their friend, Olan H. Black, executive of the Ouachita Valley boy scout council.

The naturalists will be here three days. They are at present making a field survey trip which includes studies of cave life in Indiana, Kentucky and Virginia.

Dr. Mohr is considered an authority on cave life in this country. Both he and his assistant were Eagle scouts in their younger years and both are leaders in scouting at Reading. While in Monroe the visiting naturalists will confer with George H. Lowery of this city, who has gained some distinction as a naturalist in the south and also nationally.

MAN JAILED HERE HAS LONG RECORD

Max King Has Been At Odds With Peace Officers In Many States

Max King, 26, arrested for the Ouachita parish sheriff's department last July 17 at Brookhaven, Miss., and returned here and placed in jail to await trial on a charge of embezzling an automobile owned by the 404 Taxi service, has followed a criminal career which placed him at odds with peace officers in many states of the union, the sheriff's department revealed here yesterday after receiving a copy of his fingerprint record from the division of investigation of the federal department of justice at Washington.

The car allegedly stolen here by King was recovered. He is also accused of stealing a 1928 model automobile from a dealer in Gaston, Mo. This car has been recovered in Richmond, Va.

King's fingerprint record showed that at the age of 19, on June 1, 1928, he was received at the Louisiana state penitentiary to begin serving a sentence of from one to three years for forgery.

He was arrested at Holdenville, Okla., in December, 1929, under the name of J. W. Cooks, for allegedly passing bad checks.

At Twin Falls, Idaho, in May, 1930, he was arrested and charged with second degree burglary.

He was arrested in this city in September, 1930, and charged with obtaining goods under false pretenses. The name he gave then was W. C. King.

Under the name of John Marsh, he was taken in custody at Brigham City, Utah, in June, 1930, for allegedly issuing bad checks.

At Wichita, Kans., in October, 1931, he was arrested for automobile theft and was sent to the Kansas state industrial reformatory to serve from five to 15 years.

In October of 1932, he was held by officers at Seaward, Neb., under the name of Eddie La Force, for investigation.

The last notation on his fingerprint record was his incarceration in the parish jail here charged with theft of an automobile belonging to the taxi company.

The sheriff's department yesterday arrested L. N. Snow, operator of a domino parlor, on a charge of non-support. He was released under bond of $350.

Grover Vinson of Swartz, was arrested on a warrant charging him with disturbing the peace. The warrant was sworn out by Mrs. Roy Cagle, also of Swartz.

Review Of Past Social Activities Finds Many Brilliant Affairs Staged For Charming Visitors Who Have Thronged To City

By Nell Grigsby

THERE'S a hint of autumn in the air and August days—lazy, dusty, weary August days, are trailing into fall with September peeping just around the corner.

Young girls, bright eyed, sun-tanned and exuberant with health are returning home from summer camps.

Co-eds, putting aside all frivolous affairs are beginning to pack their trunks for college. Mothers are beginning to wear a harassed look peculiar to mothers with daughters going away to school. Fathers knit their brows in serious mien, and small brothers realize that, after all, life is something more than just a long vacation. All too soon the long summer days have idled into autumn, with school and books and teachers in the offing. Speaking of teachers, sometime, when you are bored and tired and weary, and life seems but an empty dream, drive by the Barkdull Faulk school and have Miss Julia relate some of her experiences in the school room. Miss Wossman and Mrs. Granberry have a fund of facts and incidents, embroidered with a sense of humor, that will entertain even the most blasé. There's Leze for instance, who loved the song and dance. But we'll leave that story to our more experienced raconteurs. Miss Wossman and Mrs. Granberry.

Charming visitors have been thronging our city during the past week and every minute of their time has been filled with festive affairs.

Hostesses have vied with each other in entertaining this attractive group of visitors. From early dawn till late at night, they've been feted, wined and dined.

Boat rides, coffee hours, dances, teas and outdoor suppers have all been a part of the program for their entertainment.

Emily Lou Biedenharn and her lovely guest, Miss Marian Gordon Fraser of London, England, have been royally entertained with boat rides, teas, breakfasts, bridge affairs and luncheons in one continuous series, since their arrival in Monroe.

Boating has been one of the most popular pastimes during the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Biedenharn, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Biedenharn, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Flournoy have been hosts and hostesses on boat rides given for Miss Biedenharn and her guest.

Among the hostesses who have entertained with luncheons and bridge parties honoring Miss Biedenharn and Miss Fraser are Mrs. J. B. Vaughan, Mrs. Elmer Slagle, Mrs. R. H. Oliver, Jr., and Mrs. Carl McHenry.

Mrs. Clark Duncan's guests, Mrs. A. E. Hope and Mrs. A. G. Stout, of Dallas, Texas, have also come in for a flattering amount of attention.

Arriving in Monroe Friday evening were Miss Elaine Gottschalk and Miss Adrienne Gottschalk of New Orleans, who will be guests of Mrs. Prioleau Ellis this week. The social calendar is fairly overflowing with affairs planned by members of the younger set for the Misses Gottschalk for every day this week.

Miss Frances Davis, attractive bride-to-be, has been honored with several affairs, and on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. R. R. Beaman will entertain with a beautifully appointed tea at her home on North Third street, honoring her daughter, Mrs. Faye Hilliard of Houston, Tex., and Miss Davis. Winnie Helen just recently arrived in Monroe and will be a member of Miss Davis' bridal party.

Malaria, no respecter of persons, claimed Mrs. Arnold Bernstein as one of its victims. However, Mrs. Bernstein has recovered, much to the delight of her host of friends, who are happy to see her about again.

Teachers who have been spending the summer away at school, on the coast and in the mountains are beginning to trek back to Monroe to enter upon their duties with renewed interest and zeal.

Anne Lindbergh Tops The List Of New Books

And now comes the story of the Lindbergh flight to Tokyo, which Anne Morrow Lindbergh relates with real distinction. The whole world watched Anne Lindbergh and her husband fly across the uncharted part of Canada and on to the Orient four years ago, but the reader would scarcely know it from the book. Some travelers like to tell what a prominent part they played in their journey in foreign countries, but this is not true in Anne Lindbergh's book "North to the Orient."

The story deals with people, places, ice barriers, hamlets, a fisherman's hut where hunger overcame Colonel Lindbergh's doubts about food and tales of Chinese peasants caught by the flood.

Anne was the radio operator on this trip, which was a more or less appalling experience to one who had shown a profoundly regular tendency to flunk arithmetic examinations, about electricity "from the moment the man started rubbing sealing wax with fur."

Josephine Johnson's book of short stories "Winter Orchard and Other Stories," is an interesting collection of narratives. Miss Johnson is easily one of the best of the younger writers with a style of astonishing distinction.

In "Calico and Crinoline" by Eleanor Sicks is related true stories of American women. Beginning with Anne Burras the first English bride in America the story continues with the life of Anne Hutchinson on to a biography of Mother Bickerdyke nursing the soldiers wounded on the battlefields of the Civil war.

Not all of the women mentioned in the book are famous, but they help portray the everyday life and customs of the times.

A gripping mystery story, "The League of Freightmen Men," by Isaac Anderson, will appeal to readers of mystery stories. A review in the New York Times says:

A student prank, which has made a cradle of the man who was the victim of it, is back of all the strange happenings recorded in this new Nero Wolfe story. The victim is Paul Chapin, who has in the meantime become a famous novelist. During the years that have passed since the unfortunate accident which made Chapin a physical wreck his student tormentors have gone their several ways and have succeeded, or failed, in their chosen professions. When the story opens two of them have died violent deaths and the survivors have excellent reasons for believing that they have been murdered by Chapin. Then a third member of the so-called "league" disappears, and the case is taken over by Nero Wolfe, the enormously fat private investigator some of whose earlier adventures were narrated in "Fer-de-Lance."

Since Wolfe is so fat as to be virtually immovable, he employs Archie Goodwin as his field general, and that is all to the good, for Archie loves action as much as Wolfe enjoys orchids or beer. It is Archie who tells the story, and since he is as much in the dark as is the reader, there is no danger of his anticipating the denouement and thus spoiling the story. Not that Archie is stupid. He is merely unable to keep step with a genius like Nero Wolfe. But he does know how to collect the information that Wolfe needs, whether or not the person who has that information is willing to disclose it. Wolfe has other assistants, but they report more often to Archie than to his chief, for the latter is as likely as not to be so busy with his orchids that he has no time to spare for crime.

To reveal more of the plot of this excellent yarn would be unfair to the reader. Let it suffice to say that the story has everything that a good detective story should have—mystery, suspense, action—and that the author's racy narrative style makes it a pleasure to read.

VACATIONING IN MISSOURI

Miss Marjorie Chambers who is spending several weeks in St. Louis and Centralia, Mo. Upon her return to Monroe, Miss Chambers will reenter the Northeast Center of L. S. U. where she is a sophomore. Miss Chambers was recently elected president of the Gamma Gamma chapter of the Phi Theta Kappa fraternity, national junior college honorary society.

Why Shouldn't Mothers Organize?

There's probably no group of persons needing organization so badly and probably no group that has less hope of ever being organized with regular hours, regular pay and Sundays and holidays off, than our mothers and homemakers.

The average mother's tasks begin at break of day and continue far into the night.

She must be a good cook and sew a straight seam. She must know how to pull teeth, dress wounds and prescribe for every ache peculiar to childhood. She must teach Latin, algebra and care for the sick. She must pinch hit for the plumber, the painter and dentist, not to mention the electrician, the carpenter, the laundress and the bookbinder.

She arises with the dawn, cooks breakfast, gets the children ready for school. She takes her husband to work, returns by the grocery, shops for bargains, haggles with the butcher and then returns home. She cleans up the house, helps landscape the yard and answers the phone some twenty odd times. She sews on a few buttons, darns a few socks and patches some pants.

She tinkers with the ice box that refuses to function. She bakes a cake, makes a pie, concocts a salad, prepares vegetables and broils a nice steak. She goes after her husband picks up the children, settles disputes and serves them their dinner.

She returns her charges to their various destinations, returns home, washes the dishes, answers the phone and works on a committee. She darns some more socks. She helps Johnnie with his grammar, sister with her arithmetic, and big brother with his French. She makes sister a costume for the play, and repairs Johnnie's tricycle.

She plays backgammon with her husband, lets him win the most games and settles more disputes. She superintends baths, ear washings and cleansing of teeth, and then with a smile, sends them all to bed.

She is expected to be a doctor, a philosopher, a lawyer and a good sport.

Her hours are long and her pay is uncertain. Her tasks are varied and each requires skill.

Yes, there's much to be said for an organization that would if it could lighten her tasks, give her an occasional holiday and regular pay.

Dance Is Given For Monroe Visitor

C. Bell, Jr., Miss Dorothy Guerriero, Cramer Haas, Buddy O'Neal, Allen Buie, Mrs. W. F. Guerriero, Mrs. Stanley Hodges, Mrs. W. B. Morrison.

Friday afternoon Miss Gertrude Feazel assisted by her sister Miss Lallage Feazel entertained with a few tables of bridge complimentary to Miss Batten. An interesting color scheme of orchid was carried out in every detail and reflected in the orchid daisies which were used throughout the living rooms.

Guests enjoying this affair were Miss Sara Marie Batten, Miss Sue Kilgore, Mrs. Raymond Spence, Mrs. Bill Guerriero, Miss Ellen Anderson, Miss Bertha Marie Masur, Miss Ruth Potridge, of Sterling, Mrs. Clifford Benson, and Miss Dorothy Guerriero.

A Novel Way To Serve Ice Cream

Do your friends just drop in about supper time Sundays? Mary E. Dague suggests a novel way of serving ice cream. If she has no cake in the house, well and good. She serves ice cream with waffles! And this is how she makes them.

Dessert Waffles
Two and one-half cups cake flour, 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 eggs, 1 1-2 cups milk, 2-3 cup melted butter.

Beat whites and yolks of eggs separately. Beat yolks until thick and lemon colored. Sift flour once and measure. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Add beaten egg yolks, milk and melted butter and stir until smooth. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry on a platter with a wire whisk. Bake in a hot waffle iron. Serve with a mound of ice cream and sweetened fruit or other sauce.

Fresh peach sauce is good. To make it, allow one peach for each person to be served. Peel and cut in thin slices, dropping in sugar as you slice them. This prevents them from discoloring too rapidly. Be sure each slice is well coated with sugar. Cover and let stand half an hour. They will be deliciously syrupy when you want to serve them.

Women who wish to keep youthful-looking and supple as well as slender should take a tip from trim young motion picture stars who consider daily exercises as important as correct care of skin and hair.

The queens of the screen, who certainly are not overweight, not only go in for the active sports for which Hollywood is famous (tennis is a favorite), but they conscientiously and regularly practice various cut-and-dried routines to keep their muscles hard and their bodies flexible. Some go to professional exercise teachers several times a week. Others exercise by themselves, doing twists, turns and kicks that ward off stiffness and lack of grace.

Reduce That Waistline

Remember that bending and stretching exercises are excellent for the waistline. When you get out of bed in the morning, hold your knees stiff, bend forward and try to touch the floor with fingertips. Then stretch arms above your head as far as they will go, making believe that the upper part of your body is being pulled upward out of the hip sockets. Swing your arms to the right, keeping elbows close to your ears, and bend to the left as far as you can. Then to the right. Then backward.

Swing your body in a large circle, thereby hardening and stretching sluggish waistline muscles. Let your head swing backward and forward as you bend. After all, muscles at the back of the neck need special attention and you might as well give it to them while you're doing something about your middle.

While you take time out for a short rest, brush your teeth and use a mouthwash. When you have finished, go back and stand before the open window to work on legs and hips.

Holding Down Hips
Kick forward, first with one foot and then the other, keeping knees straight and toes pointed. Lie flat on the floor with ankles together and arms at the sides. Raise the left leg upward, grasp the calf of it with both hands and pull forward until the leg is straight upward from the body. Lower it slowly. Repeat, raising the right leg.

If you have a rather large bedroom, put up a bar at shoulder-level height. Balancing yourself with both hands, raise the right leg until your ankle rests across the bar. Repeat with the right leg. This ought not to be done more than ten times each morning and shouldn't be tried at all until after you have completed the simpler waistline and leg routines.

Federation Activities Engage Attention Of Fifth District

Women's Groups Plan For Winter's Program

Local Clubs Interested In Scrapbook Contest
—List Of Club Presidents In District Announced

Much interest is being shown by club women of Monroe in the scrapbook contest conducted by the Louisiana Federation of Women's clubs and many are already assembling their clippings preparatory to entering them in their books. Rules governing the contest are:

1. Three books may be entered by a district.
2. Books will be graded as to:
  - (a) Newspaper clippings of the club's activities for the year, arranged in sequence.
  - (b) Completeness—Newspaper reports of each club meeting dating from November, 1934, to November, 1935. One club program must feature publicity. The publicity feature may be simple or elaborate.
  - (c) Attractiveness—Artistic touches, pictures, local color, anything which will make the book more attractive.
3. District chairmen of press and publicity will select the three books to be entered in the state contest from her district. Clubs entering scrapbooks in the state contest will be responsible for the books to and from the annual state convention.
4. Upon the resignation of the chairman of press and publicity for the fifth district Louisiana Federation of Women's clubs Mrs. Addison Thompson of Ruston has been appointed to fill the unexpired time by the president, Miss Lillie May Long of Delta. Clubs having scrapbooks to enter in the contest will please forward them to Mrs. Thompson, Ruston, La., at least one week prior to the state convention which will be held at Natchitoches, November 8 and 9.

Versatility Marks New Campus Styles

The most simple, comfortable frock is always the campus favorite. It can be worn long after the more formal and easily recognized job is discarded. Two-piece affairs can be switched about for variety and one-piece things may be slicked up with a gay scarf, tie or belt.

The seated figure at the left of the sketch wears a two-piece dress with a buttoned-front blouse of wine velvet and a skirt of beige jersey with a box-pleated front. Tying a spotted bandanna over her head keeps this lassie's wave fresh for the week-end date.

Rose jersey is used for the second frock, with a pleated front and comfortable three-quarter sleeves. Black suede buttons and belt add contrast.

A jersey tuck-in shirt and pleated skirt are topped in the next outfit by a plaid tweed jacket.

At the right, is a classic, button-front dress done in grey jersey with wine-colored buttons. This little number is a comfort to the incorrigible ten o'clock scholar because it may be buttoned on the run.

Claiming the attention of Monroe's younger social set yesterday was the tea given by Mrs. Prioleau Ellis for her two lovely guests Miss Adrienne Gottschalk and Miss Elaine Gottschalk of New Orleans, introducing them to her Monroe friends.

An abundance of varicolored summer flowers were used in artistic arrangement throughout the living rooms. Crystal bowls filled with yellow blossoms centered the dining table. ## FARM REPAIR CREDIT GAINS OVER NATION

Purchasing Power Of Agriculturists Increases Since 1935

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Marked increase in the number and amount of farm modernization loans granted by financial institutions over the country were reported for the month of May as compared with an average age of all previous months in 1935, according to the federal housing administration.

A total of 1,326 farm modernization loans were made in May, totaling $332,418.55. From January through April there were a total of 4,620 loans made, totaling $1,918,497.04.

Buying Power Up
This sign increased modernization activity in rural sections is reported concurrently with notice that farm purchasing power is on the upgrade as compared with two years ago. A reliable source points out, for example, that the monetary return today on 119 bushels of corn will purchase a hot-water heating equipment, while in 1933, 422 bushels would have been required to finance such a purchase. Similarly, today 327 pounds of butterfat will purchase a 750-pound cream separator as compared with 653 pounds of butterfat in 1933. Similar comparisons are shown in other farm products.

See Increases
Officials of the federal housing administration anticipate additional increases in farm modernization projects during the late spring and during the summer. With increased purchasing power and lulls between planting in various localities, reports indicated that modernization projects were being planned in virtually every agricultural state.

Modernization credit advanced to farmers is not necessarily repaid in monthly installments, as is the case with urban modernization credits. Arrangements may be made with lending institutions to make payments concurrent with completion and sale of crops.

New barns, additions and repairs to farm homes, paint projects, roofing, heating, electric and water systems, wells, pumps, septic tanks, wall, floor, and other interior repairs, brick, silos, fencing are only a part of the numerous modernization projects for which lending institutions make credit available under the insured plan of the federal housing administration.

BASE PLANTING

The base planting near the house should be of shrubs which will look well in fall and winter. If they are interspersed with flowering shrubs or other flowers, the planting will be colorful during the spring, summer and early fall.

Repairs Benefit Tenants

Above is shown a modernized small commercial building with store space on the ground floor and offices on the second floor. Complete remodeling of the exterior, a new roof, new entrance, and window treatment on the ground floor are noticeable phases of this conversion. The contrast between the outmoded structure shown below is obvious. Under the amended modernization credit plan, thousands of similar buildings in the country may now be improved. Amounts up to $50,000 are now available at private lending institutions for such projects. Full particulars may be obtained at any Federal Housing Administration office.

BANK PRAISES HOUSING PLAN

Credits Deposit Increases Due To Operation Of FHA Program

CHICAGO, Ill.—Praising the Federal Housing Administration's modernization credit plan, Merton Wilcox, of the modernization loan department of the Citizens State Bank of Park Ridge, Ill., reported to the district director's office here that the bank has received approximately $70,000 in new deposits, directly assignable to "F. H. A. business" since first advancing modernization credit.

"These particular deposits," Mr. Wilcox said, "are largely commercial and were opened by contractors and supply houses with whom we had never done business before. The balance were new accounts opened by borrowers, and consist of some savings and some checking."

"To date we have made about 400 loans totaling some $225,000 face amount, and are making new ones at the rate of about 70 to 80 per month."

"We receive most of the applications from contractors and supply houses, rather than directly from the borrower. The types of applicants are many and all are investigated that show any merit whatsoever. Upon investigation and occasionally rearrangement, very many that do not look promising on first glance, turn out to be eligible and first class loans. Of course, the contrary is also true. However, we have learned that every application, regardless of how it appears on preliminary perusal, is worth some investigation before it is rejected. In the most cases, the loans that we do make, are not to habitual borrowers, although the fact that a party is a habitual borrower, is not grounds for rejection in itself. Most of our loans are made to middle-class people and are mainly for the purpose of a major operation on the property. As a class, I believe our borrowers would be typed as conservative."

In regard to the Federal Housing Administration's system of title loans, we feel that it is the outstanding piece of legislation that the New Deal has turned out. We are sure that it will develop to be the greatest single influence in lessening general unemployment and promoting general welfare. As for the operation and administration of the plan, we feel that it is a masterpiece of constructive commonsense and imagination."

MANY USES FOUND FOR ATTIC SPACE

Attics are no longer reserved for storage space. Children's playrooms, extra guest rooms or studios now occupy space which once was left for old collections of furniture, trunks, and other little needed objects. Trunks have been relegated to the basement, but no provision for their protection is made usually.

A clean, dry room will protect trunks and other luggage. If it is made a proper size, it will be used only for luggage. When the housewife goes to pack for a summer vacation, she will find the pieces she is looking for, and these in good condition.

It is an aid in protecting luggage to build racks for it a few inches above the floor. This is an added precaution in localities where it is difficult to keep the basement dry.

One case may contain shallow drawers to hold flat articles—combs, nail files, etc. Special drawers should be assigned to handkerchiefs, purses, gloves, and other small articles which are needed at the last moment after dressing.

The top may be painted with a good quality, washable enamel or may be covered with a thick piece of glass. A mirror often gives an interesting effect by reflecting gay colors from powder boxes, flowers or other objects placed on top of the dressing table. It is important, whatever material is used, that it be durable and easily cleaned.

The mirror above the table should be sufficiently large that a person can stand back from it and get as nearly a full view as possible, particularly if there is no mirror door located in the bedroom. If a large mirror is located elsewhere, the dressing table mirror may be small and placed on a stand on the top of the table.

Wall lights, properly placed at the sides of the mirror will give correct light.

Ash trays set into the top or clipped on each side of the table may be colorful. Drawer and door knobs in copper, aluminum, or bright chromium are decorative and will not soil as readily as those painted in light colors.

A comfortable bench or chair should be provided. However, if the space in the room is limited, a small seat may be attached to one of the cases so that it will swing into the knee space when not in use.

MOTH-PROOF CLOSET
A cedar closet sufficiently large to hold winter clothing for the whole family can be added in the attic. This will keep the bedroom closets which are used daily, free from crowding, and will leave space for the proper hanging of summer clothes which wrinkle easily.

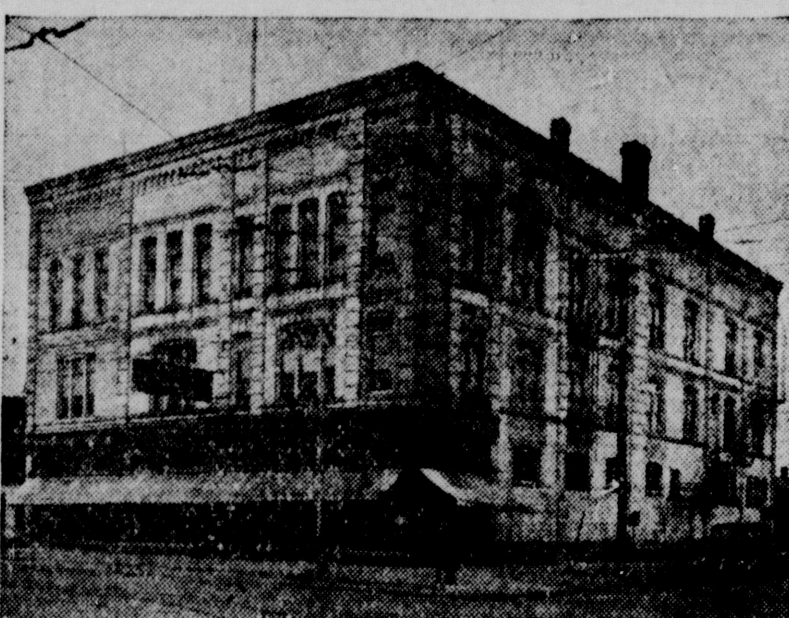

If a closet exists, line the door, walls and ceiling with three-eighths inch heart-wood aromatic red cedar. A seven-eighths inch stock cedar floor may also be added.

If no partitions exist, a closet may be made from seven-eighths inch tongue and groove red cedar.

Care should be exercised in closing all cracks, particularly those about the doors, which may be weather-stripped.

Leave the cedar natural; use no paint, varnish, or other finishes.

Store Transformed

Above are shown two views of a Green Bay, Wis., department store, before and after modernization. The top picture shows how the store appeared several months ago, before improvements were started. A modern store front was installed adding "sales appeal" as well as attractiveness. The black front, trimmed with chromium, lends a smart air to the merchandise displayed in the spacious show windows. New transom lighting was added and the entire building was repainted in four colors in a brick effect. The old awnings were replaced with a new type that roll up out of sight. The electric sign was rebuilt. The paved sidewalk in front of the building was repaired. Such modernization projects for commercial properties may be carried out under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration, under which credit up to $50,000 is available through private lending agencies.

The Built-In Dressing Table Enhances Room

A bedroom may be made more attractive as well as more efficient by the addition of a built-in dressing table.

The dressing table should be designed to harmonize with other furniture in the room. Special care should be exercised in planning it to care for the variety of articles which it will contain. Proper spaces should be provided for all sizes of bottles of lotions, jars of creams, boxes of powder, etc. It is more convenient to place these articles on shelves. These may be made to slide on small rollers, and can be separated into small compartments which will hold the bottles upright by one-half inch strips nailed to the shelf.

One case may contain shallow drawers to hold flat articles—combs, nail files, etc. Special drawers should be assigned to handkerchiefs, purses, gloves, and other small articles which are needed at the last moment after dressing.

The top may be painted with a good quality, washable enamel or may be covered with a thick piece of glass. A mirror often gives an interesting effect by reflecting gay colors from powder boxes, flowers or other objects placed on top of the dressing table. It is important, whatever material is used, that it be durable and easily cleaned.

The mirror above the table should be sufficiently large that a person can stand back from it and get as nearly a full view as possible, particularly if there is no mirror door located in the bedroom. If a large mirror is located elsewhere, the dressing table mirror may be small and placed on a stand on the top of the table.

Wall lights, properly placed at the sides of the mirror will give correct light.

Ash trays set into the top or clipped on each side of the table may be colorful. Drawer and door knobs in copper, aluminum, or bright chromium are decorative and will not soil as readily as those painted in light colors.

A comfortable bench or chair should be provided. However, if the space in the room is limited, a small seat may be attached to one of the cases so that it will swing into the knee space when not in use.

MOTH-PROOF CLOSET
A cedar closet sufficiently large to hold winter clothing for the whole family can be added in the attic. This will keep the bedroom closets which are used daily, free from crowding, and will leave space for the proper hanging of summer clothes which wrinkle easily.

If a closet exists, line the door, walls and ceiling with three-eighths inch heart-wood aromatic red cedar. A seven-eighths inch stock cedar floor may also be added.

If no partitions exist, a closet may be made from seven-eighths inch tongue and groove red cedar.

Care should be exercised in closing all cracks, particularly those about the doors, which may be weather-stripped.

Leave the cedar natural; use no paint, varnish, or other finishes.

NEW RULES AID TO PRODUCERS

Industry Predicts Huge Gains Through Amended Regulations Of FHA

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The amendments to the national housing act, covering the extension of modernization credit for improvement, conversion or equipment of commercial properties, are of direct interest and benefit to everyone producing goods or services requiring buildings or permanent equipment, according to Acting Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald.

With the amendments but a few weeks old, the federal housing administration has received proof of the interest in the new regulations from the copper industry in a letter from Benjamin B. Caddle, secretary of the Copper and Brass Research Association of New York.

The recent amendment to the national housing act increasing the maximum limit of credit for modernization from $2,000 to $50,000 will result in a market for many millions of pounds of copper and its alloys is Mr. Caddle's prediction. He expresses the belief that within the next 12 months the consumption of copper and its alloys in the building field may reach a total of more than 200,000,000 pounds.

Marked Increase
"There has been a marked increase in the use of copper, brass and other copper alloys in the building field in the modernization of homes," Mr. Caddle says, "but that, in my opinion, is a relatively small tonnage as compared with the use of these metals as a result of raising the limit to $50,000. The reason for my optimism can perhaps best be outlined in four points."

"First: Until the amendment to the national housing act was passed it was impossible for hotels to borrow sufficient money under governmental guarantee to make necessary repairs. We have received many letters, as have our member companies, from hotels announcing their intention to replace rusted pipe with either copper or brass pipe or copper tubing. They also intend replacing worn-out roofing materials with copper and plan to use solid brass and bronze hardware and lighting fixtures."

"Second: Thousands of owners of apartments are going to take advantage of the amendment to make similar repairs. They appreciate the fact that it is much easier to rent up-to-date and modernized apartments that have free-flowing water from rustproof pipe and tubing than it is to rent them if the water has a reddish color as a result of flowing through corroded pipes. Modern lighting fixtures and hardware add charm and a homey appearance to apartments."

Repairs Help Rent
"Third: Owners of multiple-family houses are going to take advantage of the liberal loans to improve their property, for, like the apartment-house owners, they realize it is much easier to rent their houses if they have been modernized."

"The hotel owner, apartment-house owner, and the multiple-house owner all appreciate the fact that vacancies naturally cause a greatly decreased revenue which not infrequently results in actual losses. That is why they are going to take advantage of the amendment, and this summer, in my opinion, will see the greatest revival of building and modernization since the depression was first felt some six years ago."

"Fourth: Industry is going to spend millions to modernize mills and factories. By modernizing in this field I mean to replace worn-out plumbing with rustproof materials. I believe the activity in this field will be far greater than most anticipate, for I recently visited factories of many diversified industries and have heard the owners and superintendents complain about leaky pipes."

BANK DESIRES MORE INSURED MORTGAGES

WOBURN, Mass.—The Woburn National bank here considers mortgages insured by the federal housing administration to be "too good an investment to dispose of." The bank recently declined to sell insured mortgages to the National Life Insurance company of Vermont. Officials of the bank stated that, far from being in the market to sell mortgages insured by the federal housing administration, they are interested in investing the full amount of their capital allowed under state laws in insured mortgages.

SEPTIC TANKS
Although the method of disposing of sewage by means of a properly designed septic tank is approved by health authorities, the discharge should not be considered harmless. Under certain conditions it will contaminate a well, stream, or other source of water supply. Care should be taken to place the discharge of the tank where there is no danger of such contamination.

FHA Plan Helps Dairies Comply With Law

KENOSHA, Wis.—In order to comply with requirements laid down by the health department of Chicago, Ill., milk producers of this section are making arrangements to construct separate milk sheds under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

A Chicago ordinance requires that producers selling milk in Chicago must install separate milk sheds. At least 500 milk producers in the vicinity of Kenosha supply part of the Chicago market. The manager of the Milk Producers association of Kenosha has estimated that each milk house built in compliance with the Chicago law will require the expenditure of $200. The association has arranged with Kenosha banks to finance such construction under the terms of the modernization credit plan.

CARE IN MIXING PAINT

Improperly mixed paints and paint materials are the direct cause of many painting failures. It is advisable to pour off one-fourth of the contents of a can of paint into another clean receptacle. Loosen any settled pigments with a paddle. The paddle should be one and one-fourth inches wide for a one gallon can and three inches wide for a five-gallon can.

Mix the paint thoroughly, using a lifting and beating motion. Then gradually add the liquid poured off, stirring this in well.

Combine the paint several times by pouring it back and forth from one can to another.

PLAN PUSHES DEPARTMENT STORE REPAIR

$50,000 Extension To Afford Aid To Retail Establishments

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Department store modernization projects are expected to show a definite increase with the passage of the amendment to the National Housing act by which the maximum credit for this type of work obtainable from approved financial institutions was increased to $50,000. Such credit will be insured by the Federal Housing administration if the credit rating of the borrower is satisfactory to the lending agency.

Through this new channel, department stores that have for several years felt the need for new decoration and equipment, but which have, due to financial stringency, been unable to do the work, will be able to carry out necessary modernization and, in many cases, find it possible to pay the obligation out of the increased profits that such work will generate.

It is stressed by the Federal Housing administration that modernization credit up to $50,000 is not advanced by the government. All such credit is obtainable from banks and other financial institutions which have been approved by the housing administration. The Federal Housing administration insures any approved lending institution against loss up to 20 per cent of the total of all modernization credit extended.

Numerous cases of business establishment improvement that have produced increases in business ranging from 25 to 50 per cent have been reported to the Federal Housing administration. Hundreds of department stores may now install new store fronts, air-conditioning systems, or completely remodel departments in their stores through the new credit extension.

The ruling in regard to equipment and machinery also opens up great possibilities for the department store owner. According to Federal Housing administration rulings governing installations of equipment and machinery in buildings, the ruling is that all equipment and machinery is allowable for modernization credit that is "peculiarly adapted to the business conducted therein or necessary to the operation thereof."

Many Possibilities
Under this ruling the possibilities are open for innumerable improvements. New glass, fixtures, plumbing, heating systems, flooring, wall repair, and other improvements which come within the provisions.

Much interest has been shown in the new regulations by merchants. The possibilities of remodeling the entire interior of a department store, the installation of new display counters, lighting systems, and other aids to increased sales are discussed in numerous inquiries received in Washington.

Modernization credit for such purposes may be obtained from approved financial institutions advancing funds in amounts up to $50,000. Such obligations are payable in equal monthly installments within a period of five years.

Porch, Garden Roof, Places For Sun Bath

As the popularity of sun bathing increases annually, many home builders and modernizers are including a porch or roof terrace in their plans for repair or new building.

Low walls or parapets, sufficiently high to insure privacy, but not too high to shut out the health-giving rays of the sun are built to enclose a flat roof or to supplant the railing of a second-floor porch. In this manner an ideal place is provided for members of the family to bathe in the sunlight.

Unpleasant glare may be eliminated by painting the floor and the inside of the parapet soft green or blue.

Another form of sun bath which is becoming popular in this country is the sun-trap. The sun-trap is an enclosure generally built in a garden, constructed of clapboard or shingle, which has three walls and no roof. The side where the wall is missing faces, generally, southeast or southwest, depending upon whether the owner desires to take sun baths in the morning or afternoon. The sun-trap is usually constructed as a permanent garden feature and is furnished with comfortable cots or benches. On the exterior walls lattices are frequently built on which roses or trailing vines are trained to give further privacy. The floor of the sun-trap may be either flagged, paved, or made of wood.

Sun-traps have been in popular use in England for many years. Their use is becoming more prevalent in the United States.

Wallpaper Blends With Built-In Effects

Many interesting and harmonious combinations may be obtained by the use of wallpaper in keeping with furnishings and woodwork in a living room. Wallpapers are available to harmonize with painted wood, stained or lacquered finishes. The use of wallpaper to carry out a period design has been carefully studied by wallpaper manufacturers. A variety of designs, colors, and textures are now available in the new washable papers and are playing a prominent part in many room modernizations.

Housing Question Box

Q—The exterior stucco walls of my house are cracking and scaling off in places. They also appear to hold much moisture. Can these conditions be remedied?

A—If the stucco coating is pulling away from the wall in large areas, it would be wise to consult an expert on the advisability of replacement with new material. If the areas are small and localized, it might be possible to have them patched.

Q—I wish to pump water from a well located 12 feet from my summer cabin. It is 19 feet from the water line to the ground. Can I use a hand pump?

A—Yes, if the total vertical distance from the low water line in the well to the storage tank is not over approximately 20 feet. It would be wise to consult one of the pump companies for accurate estimates of sizes, costs and other details of pumps which will carry the amount of water you will require. There are several improved hand pumps highly geared to minimize the effort expended in pumping. Some of these can provide water for a day's normal use in a house serving 3 or 4 persons with a maximum of 15 minutes pumping per day. These are not costly and should provide a satisfactory unit for a summer cabin. Motor-driven pumps can be secured, but might prove too costly to justify only intermittent usage.

Q—I wish to place glass doors on my dish cupboard. Can I use glass which is not set in a wooden frame?

A—An unframed door of any considerable size must be made of fairly heavy glass. It is not feasible to attempt to swing unframed glass doors, because the material is too brittle to withstand the strain of sudden jars. Also the edges chip very easily. An unframed sliding glass door may be used. Metal troughs can be purchased and should be placed at the top and bottom of the cupboard. If the cupboard is not adaptable to the use of sliding doors, a tight metal frame can be purchased.

Q—I am planning a swimming pool for my children. Is there any colored tile I can use around the edge which is not slippery when wet?

A—There are many good colors and designs in dull-finish tile which are not slippery when wet. Many architects have specified these non-slip tiles for swimming pools and showers, for they prevent many serious accidents.

Q—The floors in my old house are badly worn and require frequent refinishing. Would it be economical to replace them with some new material?

A—Very worn floors require an excessive portion of the housekeeper's time in maintaining them. Also they claim a burdensome percentage of maintenance material costs, i. e., wax, paint, or other finishes. An investment for the replacement of the old floors with wood, linoleum, or some type of composition will be repaid soon by savings in upkeep costs as well as time and labor spent in repeated application of temporary finishes.

Q—What temperature should I maintain in a room while I am varnishing the woodwork?

A—The temperature of the room, the work, and the varnish should not be less than 70 degrees. The air should be free from dust. A quick-drying caulking compound. It can also be closed with sawdust or newspapers torn into strips. Thin ordinary glue and mix it with the sawdust to form a thick paste. Pack this into the side of the joint at which the crack appears. Newspaper strips can be soaked in the thin liquid glue and laid against the crack in several thicknesses.

Q—Is there any way I can give a plain clear glass a frosted glass effect? I have tried paint but that shuts off the light.

A—A frosted glass effect may be produced by the application of tissue paper. Remove all grease from the glass with alcohol or some similar grease solvent. Cut the tissue paper to fit the glass, and apply spar varnish thinned with one-fourth as much turpentine. The paper will stick to the glass and will be waterproof.

Q—What size gutters and leaders should I use for a roof which is approximately 20 by 40 feet?

A—For all but exceptionally heavy downpours, full drainage will be provided by a leader with one square inch of area for each 150 square feet of area drained. Gutters should be of a corresponding size. At least five and one-third square inches should be provided for draining a 20 by 40-foot roof.

Protect the leader against clogging with leaves and other material with a wire cage at the intake. It is advisable to protect the inside of the gutters with tar or liquid-asphalt roofing cement. The outside should also be kept painted if the material is corrosive.

Q—There is an open joint between the top of the wall of my house and the under side of the roof. In the winter wind blows in here and makes the upper floor of the house difficult to heat. How should I fix this?

A—This crack can be closed with a

Repair Plan Gives Banks' Loans Boost

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—While the aggregate loans and discounts of 10 national banks here decreased approximately 14 per cent during the year, the loans and discounts of the Marquette National bank increased 50 per cent.

Almost one-half of this increase consisted of modernization credit advances. The greater portion of the other half consisted of loans of similar type which bank officials stated they had been prompted to make "because of happy experiences with nearly 1,000 Federal Housing Administration loans and not a single serious delinquency."

Expressions of cooperation given by the Marquette National bank to the state office of the Federal Housing Administration were recently received by State Director Fred Schlipplin from Ralph W. Manuel, president of the bank.

PROTECT WALLS FROM MOISTURE

Water Permeation Is One Cause Of Much Damage To Masonry

The presence of efflorescence on the walls of a house indicates that moisture is present in the walls.

Masonry walls should be kept in a constant state of repair so that the danger of water permeation will be minimized. Infiltration and seepage of water may be due to several causes: Lack of flashing above or through the masonry near the top of the wall; a leak in the flashings, gutters, or downspouts; deteriorated eaves or copings; lack of protection at window sills; insufficient drainage on roof and porches; failure to cap the chimney.

Private capital for the repair, protection, and modernization of homes is available through credit offered by financial institutions cooperating with the federal housing administration which is insuring such institutions against loss in accordance with

Less Crime

Home Plan Will Reduce Frequency, Warden Avers

ALBANY, N. Y.—Characterizing the better housing program as an effective means to reduce crime in the nation, Joseph H. Brophy, warden of Auburn prison, Auburn, N. Y., nationally known for his humanitarianism and knowledge of criminology, placed his unqualified endorsement on the federal housing administration program in a letter received here by Chris Dorn, associate director. Warden Brophy's letter read as follows:

"The better housing program which is being sponsored by the United government, if taken advantage of by homeowners, will, in my opinion, be of great assistance in helping to reduce crime. Better homes and more pleasant surroundings will have a tendency to keep our boys and girls closer to their own homes instead of having to seek this environment elsewhere."

"During my 27 years as a police officer, the provisions of the national housing act.

ficial I have been brought in contact with hundreds of criminals who were born or reared in the slum districts of our country, and I honestly believe that if a large percentage of them had been born or reared in locations where better homes existed they would have been saved from a life of crime.

"I earnestly appeal to the home owners, particularly in the slum districts, to take advantage of this great opportunity offered by our government. By so doing they will be of great help in protecting our present and future generations from falling into evil ways and perhaps becoming inmates of penal institutions and a burden upon the taxpayers of the community."

Light

Modernization Increases Egg Output

NEW YORK—Reports received here from Schuyler County, N. Y., tell how Luther Fuller, a farmer, almost doubled the egg production of his flock of 400 hens by electrical modernization. For some time he had been anxious to install electric lights both in his home and in his hen house. He obtained modernization credit of $300 from a bank and carried out the electrical project. Before lights were installed in the hen house his 400 hens were laying 180 eggs a day. Following the installation they averaged 345 eggs a day. The additional egg output is carrying all payments and at the same time leaving considerable profit to Mr. Fuller.

HARLEM. AND LET ME TELL YOU - WHEN I GETS OUT OF HERE - I'SE GOING STRAIGHT.

BUT LISTEN, GAL...
STAY AWAY FROM DAT
BIG DAME OVER DERE...
SHE POISONED HER FATHER-IN-LAW! SHE'S A BAD WOMAN!

STOP IT! STOP IT!
I DON'T WANT TO HEAR ANY MORE!
THIEVES, MURDERERS,
CRIMINALS...
I CAN'T BEAR IT!

WHAT'S THIS?

KEEP YOUR MOUTH
SHUT, YOU LITTLE FOOL!
ANOTHER OUTBURST LIKE THAT AND YOU'LL HAVE THIS WHOLE PACK ON YOUR BACK. COME ON BACK TO YOUR CELL AND REST.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT, EH?

STIR-CRAZY!
HAH!

TOO BAD
LITTLE POND LILY!

THAT NIGHT...

SLEEP? HAH!
DON'T YOU SEE THE WALLS ARE FALLING IN ON ME? THE CEILING'S DROPPING
DOWN... I'LL BE CRUSHED!

NOW, LISTEN...
THIS IS THE THIRD TIME I'VE BEEN BACK HERE.
SNAP OUT OF IT...
OR IT'S SOLITARY
FOR YOU.

CALL THE DOC.
TELL HIM TO DROP
AROUND HERE TOMORROW MORNING.

MEANWHILE...

BUT DON'T YOU UNDERSTAND, CHIEF?
SHOES... AND IT HAS A SECRET SLOT
IN THE SOLE.

YES, YES.
BUT HOW DOES THAT TIE UP TO TOBY?

THIS FOUNTAIN PEN
GUN THAT KILLED DONOVAN
FITS INTO THE SLOT PERFECTLY.
IT WAS BLAKE THAT DID THE SHOOTING, NOT TOBY!

I'M AFRAID
HAVE A HARD TIME PROVING THAT,
TRACY.
